Winds Up Work Week.

By JAMES DEAKIN

A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 15—President Eisenhower will confer in his hospital room Monday with Vice President Richard M. Nixon, it was announced today. It will be his first meeting with Nixon since his illness.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said Mr. Eisenhower also would meet again Monday with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, who visited him for the first time yesterday.

Both appointments are for 9 a.m., but Hagerty said he did not know whether Dulles and Nixon would see the President together or separately.

The President's doctors gave him the most optimistic medical reports to date today, intensifying the already-acute interest in his political plans.

Hagerty, however, continued to discourage all attempts to gain a hint of when Mr. Eisenhower may comment on his second-term intentions in the light of his illness, operation and steady recovery.

"I know he has not discussed it (the political situation) with his staff," Hagerty said.

He was equally adamant in refusing to throw open to discussion the related question of whether Mr. Eisenhower's physicians expect his abdominal condition to recur.

Draws a Laugh.

After saying flatly that no member of the White House staff had discussed politics with the Chief Executive since he entered Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Hagerty added amid laughter that he was "certain" Mr. Eisenhower did not talk domestic politics with Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of West Germany and Dulles when they visited him yesterday.

And, Hagerty went on, Mr. Eisenhower has no telephone in his bedroom, the clear implication being that he has not discussed politics with anyone, something that Hagerty has been maintaining right along.

In answer to a question, he said Mr. Eisenhower's illness and abdominal operation had not slowed up operations of the executive branch of government "at all."

In the second encouraging medical bulletin of the day, physicians said the normal physiological activities of Mr. Eisenhower's intestinal tract had been restored.

Normal Digestion.

Hagerty explained that this meant his digestive tract was now functioning normally, and the small amounts of liquids he is being given by mouth every hour are being digested without difficulty.

The text of the bulletin: "The President's condition continues to progress very satisfactorily."

"His temperature, blood pressure, pulse and respiration are normal. Blood chemistry tests made this morning are within normal limits."

"Normal physiological activity of the intestinal tract has been restored."

"The President took his walking exercises again this morning and sat up in an easy chair for about a half hour. Later he conducted for 15 minutes White House business with the staff."

Hearing Says Military Jet Flights Are a Hazard.

A warning that unless combat military jet aircraft are removed from Lambert-St. Louis Field there will be a serious crash involving loss of life was given in charge in St. Louis at the second and final day of hearings at Kiel Auditorium yesterday.

Sidney F. McCullough, general sales manager for Ozark Air Lines, Inc., and former safety agent in charge in St. Louis for the Civil Aeronautics Administration, told the panel of a number of crashes of jet military planes near the field in recent months.

"It is merely a matter of time until one of these planes strikes a home or a vehicle and kills a number of people," he said. He pointed out two crashes of this kind had occurred this month near the Minneapolis airport and predicted the same thing would happen here unless military jet operations are removed from the field.

As to the test flying of jets from the field, McCullough said he knew of some emergency tests that have occurred in the last 30 days involving these craft.

In one case, he said, he saw a McDonnell Aircraft Corp. F-101 jet burn off its tires and brakes when its tail chute failed to open. The plane stopped within about 75 yards of Natural Bridge road, he said.

UNION ELECTION
ENDS WITH THREE MEN IN HOSPITALS

Local No. 5 of the Carpenters' Union had a very quiet election last night at Gambrinus Hall, 3628 Wisconsin avenue. It was after the voting, at a gathering in the basement tavern, when the trouble began.

At first the normal hum of conversation about the election was just occasionally punctuated by a shout. These became more frequent as the evening wore on. Finally, every sentence was shouted. Then fists began to fly. Police came and three men landed in hospitals for treatment at 2 a.m. today.

Charles J. Wurtz, 2709 South Eleventh street, the defeated candidate for president, and Ruben Hopkins, 3504 South Skyring avenue, were taken to City Hospital with head cuts. Later they were booked suspected of peace disturbance.

Ray Sutton, 4239 Bingham avenue, was treated at Alexian Brothers Hospital. He was not arrested because he told police he injured his head falling up five steps trying to get out of the place.

The election? Arthur Knittel was elected president.

ROME, June 15 (AP)—Two tigers escaped from their cage today and scared a lot of people and livestock on circus grounds near the Basilica of St. John Lateran.

Scores of women and children ran screaming, caged animals roared and circus horses whinnied as the tigers ran free. One tiger slashed a circus donkey.

It was all over in 90 minutes. The truckloads of riot police helped circus workers, under the direction of animal trainer Darix Togni, corner the beasts in sectional pens and put them back behind bars.

MAN PULLED OUT OF AUTO, BEATEN
BY TEEN-AGERSWife and Daughter See Attack—Five
Youths Are in Police Custody.

Marvin Noelken, 1623A Knapp street, was pulled from his automobile, beaten, knocked down, struck with a cane and kicked last night by a group of teen-agers who pursued his machine in their own car for 28 blocks, he reported to police.

Noelken, his wife and two small daughters were returning from a drive-in theater at the time of the attack, which occurred about midnight.

Mrs. Noelken, expecting another child next month, stayed in the car during the beating with her younger daughter, 1 year old, asleep on her lap but glimpsed the license plate before it was covered up by one of the attackers. Her 2-year-old daughter witnessed the beating.

Jennings police turned over to St. Louis police two teen-agers who admitted being at the scene of the beating but denied taking part in it.

Three other youths, one a cripple using a metal cane, were arrested today by St. Louis police. The disabled youth denied using the cane in the beating and denied taking part in the beating at all.

Those in custody identified themselves as John Wayne McLeskey, 18 years old, driver of the car, of the 7200 block of Sappington avenue; William Rainey, 17, of the 8700 block of Agate court, both of Jennings.

John Pavlovits, 18, a clerk, 5500 block of Era avenue; Ronald Babst, 19, a roofer, 1500 block of Clara avenue, and Donald M. Bruton, 18, unemployed, 4200 block of Pleasant street.

Pavlovits wears a foot brace and gets about with the aid of the cane. He has thin legs and a powerfully developed upper body with massive shoulders.

Babst, a muscular youth about 5 feet, 3 inches tall, said he had served five months in the City Workhouse on one of four burglary and larceny charges lodged against him.

Bruton, tattooed on the arm with what police called a Pacheco park, signifying membership in a gang dedicated to violence, said he had been fined in St. Louis county on a peace disturbance charge.

McLeskey, who surrendered to Jennings police when told by his mother they were looking for him, said he had previously served 10 months for automobile theft. He said he is a factory worker.

Rainey, who said he was unemployed and refused to give his parents' names, was described by Jennings police as out on bond in connection with a St. Louis county robbery.

Rainey is of unusually stocky build, with thick chest and arms, but is not fat. He is 5 feet 7 inches tall and weighs 210 pounds.

McLeskey, 5 feet 8 inches tall, weighs 165 pounds.

McLeskey, who said he owned the car he was driving, asserted the Noelken automobile had cut him off by swerving in front of his car near Rutkin

PUBLIC HEARINGS CALLED ON CITY'S PARKING PLANS;
DELAY AVOIDEDAldermen Allevy Business Men's Fears—Session Friday on Garages; June 29 on Baden Project.

Speedy public hearings will be held on the city's proposals to build two municipal garages in downtown St. Louis and a municipal parking lot in the Baden shopping district, the aldermanic zoning committee decided today.

A hearing on the downtown garages was set for next Friday at 2 p.m. in Room 208 at City Hall. A hearing on the Baden parking lot will be held June 29 at 10:15 a.m.

The decision to conduct the hearings before the Board of Aldermen recesses for the summer was welcomed by business men who have agreed to help the city finance the parking facilities. It had been feared that the garage proposals might be held up in committee indefinitely as a result of opposition from operators of commercial garages and parking lots.

Committee to Visit Areas.

Alderman James W. Noonan, chairman of the zoning committee which is considering bills authorizing the city to condemn property needed for the proposed parking facilities, announced that the committee will tour the downtown area next Thursday. Parking facilities now available will be inspected.

One of the proposed garages would cover the entire block bounded by Broadway and Chestnut, Pine and Sixth streets. The other would take up most of the block bounded by Eighth and Ninth streets, Delmar boulevard and Lucas avenue.

The Baden parking lot would be located on Bitter street near North Broadway.

Start on Condemnation.

Alderman Archie Blaine of the Sixth Ward introduced bills to condemn land for the downtown garages, but at the same time announced that he questioned whether the municipal parking facilities would be in the best interests of small business men.

In a statement read into the record today he said: "I feel strongly that a separate hearing should be held on the question of the downtown problems will not be confused with other areas. I ask no courtesy of any one."

"I would like Mayor Tucker to explain what efforts he has made to get these projects financed by private business men, an urban redevelopment corporation, or some other private business group."

"I would like a member of the city's parking commission to appear and explain why the southeast corner of the Eighth and Delmar site, owned by a bank, is deemed too unimportant to be included in plans."

The corner referred to is occupied by the new drive-in bank of Mercantile Trust Co. Blaine said he had asked the chairman of the zoning committee to "do his job" and set a hearing when all the problems involved could be discussed by business men and other civic leaders. "I hope a hearing will be held soon and all these problems which the people in my ward are concerned about will be fully answered," he concluded.

Bills Introduced.

A bill setting up seven major routes for interstate transport trucks passing through St. Louis was reintroduced by Alderman A. J. Cervantes, reviving a measure that died in the last session.

The bills were introduced calling for: Appropriation of $1,500,000 in bond issue funds for purchase of three blocks from the Land Clearance for Redevelopment Authority to develop the park which will link Aloe and Memorial plazas.

Appropriation of $2,000,000 from bond issue funds to defray the city's share of the cost of acquiring rights-of-way for expressways.

A permit system for private rubbish haulers, whose vehicles would be inspected to make certain that debris is not spilled on streets.

A $20-a-month salary increase for 23 employees of the House of Detention.

Designation of Morganford road as a major thoroughfare from Gravois avenue to the city limits, which would mean erection of stop signs to halt traffic on all cross streets.

Installation of electric traffic signals at Kingshighway and Oakland avenue.

Library Nominees Approved.

The Board of Aldermen approved reappointment of Henry B. Pfleger, E. R. Cuyler III and Mrs. Warren R. Rainey to the Public Library board of directors.

Pfleger's reappointment had been held up by political opponents of Mayor Raymond R. Tucker after Pfleger was elected to the board of freeholders which will study modernization of the city charter.

The aldermen voted to appropriate $140,000 to cover the

U.S. JOBS ORDERED REHIREDRenewal of Broad Grand Jury Inquiry in Tax Scandals LikelyInvestigating Body, in Recess During Connolly-Caudle Trial, Prepared to Meet Monday.

The federal grand jury which has been investigating tax scandals in the Truman Administration is expected to resume its inquiry on a full scale, following the conviction yesterday of Matthew J. Connolly and T. Lamar Caudle, the Post-Dispatch was told today.

In recess since April 4, the grand jury is prepared to meet Monday if called by United States District Judge George H. Moore.

Judge Moore announced when the jury's recess began that he would recall it immediately upon being advised by the Justice Department that "it desires to go forward in the inquiry into the obstructing of justice and corruption angles of the Internal Revenue investigation."

Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr., who asked that the jury suspend its investigation until after the Connolly-Caudle trial, said the outcome of the case would "affect and probably determine the entire course of the general inquiry."

The grand jurors, whose term expires July 23, had complained that the Justice Department was stalling the tax inquiry, but Brownell pointed out that continuance of the investigation, with resultant publicity, might be used by defense attorneys for Connolly and Caudle as the basis for delaying the trial or seeking a new one.

Return of additional indictments, possibly involving other high officials in the Truman Administration, is considered likely when the grand jury inquiry is resumed, the Post-Dispatch was informed.

One phase of the inquiry has been efforts by individuals to delay or impede work of a 1951 federal grand jury which was looking into the handling of income tax cases here.

Connolly, who was President Truman's appointments secretary, and Caudle, former head of the Justice Department's tax division, will be sentenced July 19 by United States District

BROWNELL SAYS
17 ARE AFFECTED;
NOTICE IS SENT TO ALL AGENCIES

Administration's Action

Is Taken in Compliance
Court Ruling of Last Monday.

WASHINGTON, June 15 (AP)

—The Eisenhower Administration today suspended application of its federal employee security program to persons holding non-sensitive jobs.

The action was taken in compliance with a Supreme Court decision of last Monday. One result is that 17 suspended federal employees will be restored to duty at once.

Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. announced he was informing all departments and agencies "that any employee holding a non-sensitive position and presently under suspension in pending civilian employee security proceedings should be restored to duty immediately."

"There are 17 such employees," his statement said.

Brownell said today's action was taken to assure that the Executive branch "complies fully" with the Supreme Court ruling.

No New Cases to Be Started.

"Additionally," he said, "the agencies are being advised that, pending further study of the effect of the Supreme Court decision, no removal proceedings should be commenced against any employee in a non-sensitive position under (the President's) Executive Order 10450."

That order established the present security system and applied it throughout the Government. It was issued under the federal employee security program, no removal proceedings should be commenced against any employee in a non-sensitive position under (the President's) Executive Order 10450.

The Supreme Court's 6-to-3 decision held that the program could be applied only to jobs "directly concerned with the national safety." This eliminated jobs which in government language are "non-sensitive."

The court specifically held that the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, told the subcommittee at a public hearing he does know that "a considerable amount of foreign hot money" has come in since 1945. The flow has been diminishing in the last four or five years, he said.

He added that "I know next to nothing" about the real sources of the hard-to-trace capital, but that it would be "technically quite feasible for Russia or any other country to get dollars through Swiss or other foreign banks, and invest the money in this country anonymously."

Bloomfield was the first witness in hearings at which the subcommittee announced it will explore the need for new laws "against infiltration created by programs of certain foreign countries which permit undisclosed monies of citizens of all nations, including Communist ones, to invade the United States economy."

Financed by U.S. Aid.

Bloomfield placed in evidence a monograph he wrote on the "hot money" subject in 1954. In it he contended, among other things, that "a significant part of the foreign aid of the United States Government has in effect gone to finance hot money movements from the recipient countries to the United States and elsewhere."

Bloomfield defined "hot money" as capital which is moved or manipulated to "clandestine or illegal purposes," sometimes to escape taxes in the country of its origin.

He said this country has no controls on the flow of foreign capital, and indicated he doubts that any United States controls would be much more effective than those of the countries which do use them, and from Nearly half of the Government's 2,300,000 employees were removed from the security program by the decision. The remaining 1,300,000 employees work in departments and agencies specifically listed as sensitive in the 1950 statute.

The Civil Service Commission said in response to inquiries that no figures are available on non-sensitive workers who may have been fired prior to Brownell's directive.

A Justice Department spokesman refused to reveal the names of the workers reinstated by Brownell's action. He said it is long-standing policy to refuse to identify security risks unless the workers themselves make public their suspension or dismissal.

WORLD TENSION, VAGUE FUTURE CALLED FACTORS IN DELINQUENCY

New Official of Youth Commission Says Fewer Family Controls Also Help to Aggravate Problem.

Juvenile delinquency today is aggravated by general world tension and youths' not knowing what tomorrow will bring—war-time service, a job or further schooling, Kenneth R. Foreman, recently-named executive secretary of the Metropolitan Youth Commission, declared yesterday in Mayor Raymond R. Tucker's office.

Foreman, who has been working on a juvenile crime survey in St. Louis county since mid-May, conferred in the Mayor's office with Tucker, County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews and members of the commission.

Emphasizing that youth problems are the problems of the entire community, he cited economic factors and the desire for financial betterment as underlying factors.

The general rise in juvenile delinquency stems in part from fewer social controls within the family circle, he said, continuing:

"More mothers are working today. There is more money to be earned than in the past and therefore more mothers are out of the home.

"The problems St. Louis is facing are the same that are being faced in other communities throughout the nation. St. Louis has experienced less of the serious-type offenses than have other cities."

Held Federal Post.
Foreman, director of the Kentucky Children's Bureau for the last two years, served from 1948 to 1954 as regional representative of the United States Department of Health, Education and Welfare children's bureau. Earlier he worked for a private child welfare agency in Los Angeles.

Foreman, whose youth commission job becomes effective Aug. 1, praised creation of the commission as a sound attack on an area-wide problem.

"The commission's work," he said, "is vital and important. The focus of the commission is to enter into co-operative partnership with all other community forces on the juvenile delinquency problem. The commission will not supplant other agencies but co-ordinate the activities and efforts of all."

"The essential interest of the commission is to bring into proper focus the needs of children and youth in this community and particularly for those in conflict with the law, and to propose means of strengthening existing agencies—police courts, social agencies, schools, youth groups, churches and most important, parents."

Others at Conference.
Youth commission members with whom he conferred yesterday were Mrs. Arthur Stockton, chairman; Arthur B. Shepley Jr., and Mrs. Irvin Bettmann Jr.

Foreman, 46 years old, is married and the father of three children ranging in age from 8 to 16. He expects to bring his family here in August.

Meanwhile, 50 county officials, whose positions bring them in contact with youth problems, attended a meeting at the courthouse yesterday afternoon called by Prosecuting Attorney Edward W. Garnholz.

He said suggestions will be sought for strengthening and changing state laws and municipal ordinances relating to juvenile delinquency.

Those invited include the county's five magistrates, four constables, chiefs of police and municipal judges from the 96 communities and representatives of the sheriff's office, State Highway Patrol and coroner's office.

Garnholz said he would ask the group to consider changing state laws to make juveniles subject to the jurisdiction of municipal courts instead of juvenile courts in traffic cases; make parents financially re-

DEMOCRATS VOTE ALDERMANIC JOB TO LEROY OETTER

Employment of Leroy C. Oetter, former city editor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, to serve on a part-time basis as director of legislative research for the Board of Aldermen was voted today at a caucus of the Democratic majority.

Six of the 25 Democratic aldermen objected, it was learned. They pointed out that leaders of the St. Louis Newspaper Guild and the St. Louis Typographical Union were opposed to selection of Oetter for the newly created position, and contended that the Central Trades and Labor Union should be consulted.

But Oetter had the backing of John J. Dwyer, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, who brought pressure to bear on his behalf.

An effort previously had been made to employ Oetter on a full-time basis at a salary of $10,000 a year, but after opposition developed Oetter withdrew his name from competition, asserting that he could not devote all his time to this work. Terms of the contract have not been finally agreed upon, but it was rumored that Oetter would be offered $10,000 for his part-time services.

His proposed duties would be to keep aldermen better informed on pending bills, study legislative research in Congress, the State Legislature and leading cities, and make recommendations for procedural improvements here.

TEAR GAS GUN CHARGES AGAINST CRITIC DROPPED

Charges against Francis A. Klein, Globe-Democrat music and art critic who fired a pencil-type tear gas gun at a man with whom he had a dispute March 9, were dismissed by the city counselor's office today.

Complaining witnesses did not appear in Police Judge Morris Rosenthal's court when the case was called today, and charges of peace disturbance and discharging a firearm were not pressed.

Klein engaged in a dispute with a taxicab passenger at Fourteenth and Chestnut streets, Klein said he fired the gas gun when the man approached him with arms raised in a threatening manner.

Responsible for vandalism done by the officer's compulsory state automobile inspection for mechanical safety; establish a state speed limit, and strengthen legislation prohibiting the sale of dangerous and deadly weapons to minors.

James W. Connor, operating director of the St. Louis Crime Commission, walked out of the meeting after learning it was closed to the press. "Discussions of this nature are the public concern," he said, "and the public is entitled to know what goes on at such meetings."

Television Discussion.
In another consideration of juvenile problems here, sharp differences of opinion developed on the advisability of setting up supervised drag racing in the city or county. The discussion was telecast over Station KTVI.

Appearing on "Labor Views the News," a program presented by Teamsters Union Joint Council 13, Judge Noah Wein, chairman of the county juvenile court classed supervised drag strips with the school for crime that was supervised by Fagin in the Charles Dickens novel "Oliver Twist."

Major Eugene Pond, chief of detectives in Kansas City, who helped organize drag racing clubs there to cut down on drag racing on public highways, reiterated his belief in the soundness of this approach to the problem.

Jurisdiction Query.
A difference of opinion developed, too, over whether supervision of drag strips falls properly within police jurisdiction. Lt. Richard Hackmeyer of the county police department said he did not feel this work was a police responsibility.

He added he thought his department would have no objection, however, to a properly operated strip in the county.

Pond asked Hackmeyer: "Whose problem is it?"

"The problem of law enforcement on drag racing is our problem," Hackmeyer answered.

Pond asked: "Don't you believe the law enforcement agencies should keep in touch with violators?"

Hackmeyer said he thought so.

UNION REBUFS MITCHELL'S BID FOR G.O.P. VOTES

Upholsterers' President Differs With Labor Secretary After Convention Speech.

Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell made a bid for labor support of the Republican party before a convention of the Upholsterers' Union here yesterday but was rebuffed by Sal B. Hoffmann, president of the union.

At the end of Mitchell's address, at the Coronado Hotel, in which he asserted Democratic control of Congress blocked proposals of the Eisenhower Administration for improved labor legislation, Hoffmann took issue with him with an apology for differing with a guest and a tribute to Mitchell personally.

Hoffmann, who said he knew Mitchell "was with us but I am quite sure his President and his Cabinet are not for us," blamed a coalition of "reactionary Republicans and Dixiecrats" for opposing labor's aims.

RENEWAL LIKELY OF BROAD INQUIRY IN TAX SCANDALS

Judge Ruben M. Hulen. Maximum penalty would be five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

A jury in Judge Hulen's court yesterday found the two defendants guilty of conspiring to defraud the Government by helping Irving Sachs, a St. Louis income tax evader, avoid prosecution.

Sachs, head of Shu-Stiles, Inc., was fined $40,000 on a plea of guilty of evading $128,721 in taxes, but escaped going to prison because of ill health.

Reaction in Senate.
Senator John J. Williams (Rep.) of Delaware told the Senate yesterday the conviction of Connelly and Caudle shows that corruption "reached all the way to the top echelon" in the Truman Administration.

Williams ordered publication in the Congressional Record of news dispatches reporting the verdict, along with a condensed version of the book, "The Truman Scandals."

He said there have been 214 indictments and 101 convictions involving Internal Revenue officials in the period from 1950 through Nov. 20, 1954.

Williams and Judge Moore were responsible for the original inquiry into the manner in which tax cases originating in St. Louis were handled. James P. Finnegan, who was Collector of Internal Revenue here, was convicted of misconduct in office and served a prison term.

Former President Truman, who is on an European tour, was in Amsterdam, Holland, when informed of the conviction of Connelly and Caudle. He declined to comment.

Connelly and Caudle said motionless in the courtroom when the verdict was read at 10:15 a.m. yesterday, after the jury had deliberated a total of nine hours.

Judge Hulen announced he would hear motions, also on July 19, after defense attorneys announced they would seek a new trial.

Romanian Chief Still Ill.
VIENNA, June 15 (AP)—President Petru Groza of Romania is still confined to bed after suffering a heart attack four weeks ago, the Bucharest radio reported today. He is 71 years old. The broadcast said doctors described Groza's progress and general state of health as satisfactory.

JAMES P. MITCHELL

delivered recently before the AFL-CIO Amalgamated Clothing Worker, said 114 Congressmen from states with laws banning union shops were Democrats and only 37 Republicans.

They are blocking even "non-controversial" labor legislation, he said, such as equal pay for men and women, federal grants to aid in improvement of state safety laws, and provision for overtime on federal construction jobs.

Claims of Progress.
Mitchell said that since the start of the Eisenhower Administration progress has been made in eliminating racial discrimination, in advancement of civil rights, creation of higher living standards and other measures desired by labor.

"The same people who are anti-Negro, anti-Jew and anti-Catholic," Mitchell said, "are also anti-labor. Every year we are seeing greater progress through eventual elimination of discrimination."

Both wages and "real" purchasing power of workers, Mitchell said, have increased with an average weekly gain of $6 during the past three years. The cost of living, he maintained, has been "virtually steady" during that time so that wages represent "a real gain in purchasing power."

"How can one say that this Administration is not in favor of the working man?" Mitchell asked.

"I want to see that the men and women of this country exercise political freedom," he continued, "and I am convinced that once the American working man knows the story he is going to exercise the franchise intelligently."

$600 STOLEN FROM TRUCK
Michael Bickner, a driver for the Capital Vending Co., 2623 Olive street, reported to police that money bags containing about $600 were stolen from his truck yesterday while he was making a service call in the 3500 block of Olive.

Hensley declined to comment on any new policies "until I get my feet on the ground." However, he has previously stated he is in favor of the system of deputizing police officers of county municipalities to provide more manpower for the department.

"I'm extremely happy to be back in St. Louis county," he said. "I feel that way because I had a hand in setting up this department and have enjoyed working with the men." Hensley was here for six months as deputy superintendent. He was on leave from his position in Kansas City.

He said he would remain here until he takes over his new position, salary for which is $10,000 annually. His wife and family will come after he assumes command.

2400 DOUGHNUTS GET 12 GIRLS TO MUNICIPAL OPERA
Twelve girls, members of the Chrisman High School glee club of Independence, Mo., attended the Municipal Opera in Forest Park last night, proving that not only can they sing, but they can cook.

They baked and sold 2400 doughnuts to neighbors and friends to get money to come here to see their former glee club leader, Miss Rosemary Dyson, who is now a member of the opera's singing chorus. Their present glee club leader, Mrs. K. C. Lennard, came with them.

"If these girls can bake doughnuts as well as they could sing three-part harmony when I had the glee club last year," Miss Dyson said, "I can understand why their doughnuts sold so well."

After seeing "Annie Get Your Gun" and keeping a close eye on their former teacher as she performed, the girls agreed they would "do it all over again" just to come to the opera.

HENSLEY URGES COUNTY POLICE YOUTH BUREAU

New Superintendent Says Kansas City Has Had One for Last 11 Years.

Raymond W. Hensley, who will succeed Albert E. DuBois as superintendent of St. Louis County Police, today called for establishment of a youth bureau in the department to combat juvenile delinquency and to aid in setting up supervised teenage activities.

Hensley arrived yesterday and spent the day with DuBois in conferences concerning departmental policies. He will assume his duties next Friday, the day DuBois's resignation becomes effective. DuBois has accepted a governmental position.

Recalling that juvenile problems all over the country have been attracting considerable attention, Hensley said, the problems "are a matter of serious concern." He added that the department would require additional personnel and more funds for a youth bureau.

"Authorization for the bureau," he said, "would, of course, have to come from the County Council."

Kansas City Has Bureau.
He said a youth bureau had been operating in the Kansas City Police Department for the last 11 years. It functions both as a crime prevention bureau and an agency for controlling and policing juvenile activities.

A week ago DuBois appeared before the county council and recommended a juvenile division in the department to consist of three men and two women. He suggested the new personnel would need special training and office space. Hensley today endorsed this recommendation.

Hensley, a former lieutenant in charge of the Kansas City Police Academy, or training school, assisted DuBois in setting up the county department.

Continued expansion of the department will be necessary, Hensley said, to keep up with the growth of the county. The present authorized strength is 94 officers. DuBois has estimated that about 25 more men are needed to adequately police the unincorporated areas of the county.

Comment on Policies.
Hensley declined to comment on any new policies "until I get my feet on the ground." However, he has previously stated he is in favor of the system of deputizing police officers of county municipalities to provide more manpower for the department.

LACLEDE TO ADD 10,000 NATURAL GAS CUSTOMERS

Made Possible by New Underground Reservoir in Northern Part of County.

Laclede Gas Co. will supply natural gas to at least 10,000 more homes in St. Louis and St. Louis county next winter under a program approved today by the Missouri Public Service Commission, company officials announced.

Addition of the new customers will be made possible by the company's new underground reservoir in the northern part of the county, where storage of gas began last December.

Within a few years, company officials said, a total of at least 50,000 more homes can be supplied with gas because of the storage project.

New customers will be added from year to year as the amount of storage in the reservoir is increased, they said. Excess gas from the pipelines not required during warm weather months is being stored in the reservoir. In cold months, when demand is high, little gas can be stored.

Robert W. Otto, Laclede board chairman, said the company will take the additional customers this year on the basis of not more than one new home for each existing home whose owner has applied to convert his heating system from other fuels.

The company, he said, will advise persons now on the conversion waiting list that they are eligible for permits to obtain gas, giving priority to those who have been waiting the longest.

From 30,000 to 40,000 homeowners are on the waiting list at present, Laclede officials said. The company now provides gas to 147,000 homes in the city and county.

FIREMEN RESCUE WORKER TRAPPED BY DITCH CAVE-IN
One man was rescued by firemen and another managed to free himself when a ditch in which they were working caved in at 7025 Theodore avenue Jennings, today. They were taken to Faith Hospital.

Kenneth C. Dodd, 1829 Warren street, scrambled free, but Clifford Batzel, 1902A Mallinckrodt street, was trapped in dirt up to his armpits. Firemen, called by other workmen, dug him out.

Dodd and Batzel are employees of Edward Larue, plumbing contractor, of Jennings. They were laying sewer pipe in the ditch, which was being dug by a mechanical ditch-digger.

Other stars will be lovely Christine Mathews, one of last summer's most popular leading ladies, and Tony Bavaar, who created a sensation in the original New York production of "Paint Your Wagon." Written by the authors of "Brigadoon" and the current success "My Fair Lady," "Paint Your Wagon" is the lusty, colorful, amusing story of gold fever in the California gold rush days, with such songs as "I Talk to the Trees" and "They Call the Wind Maria." Famed critic Brooks Atkinson of the New York Times called it "wonderful theatre... a musical jamboree." ### PRESIDENT TO BE VISITED MONDAY BY NIXON, DULLES

Signs Documents.

Sitting up in bed, Mr. Eisenhower signed his name to 21 documents and letters, including nine minor bills. Hagerty said this disposed of all the pending business, and there would be nothing more until Monday, barring emergencies.

The President, he said, will have the weekend "off" with no official visitors scheduled. When Adams told the doctors this, he added, they agreed it would be a "fine idea" to let Mr. Eisenhower rest.

In the morning work session, Mr. Eisenhower accepted the resignation of Samuel M. Brownell as United States Commissioner of Education. Brownell asked to be relieved by Sept. 1 for "personal reasons."

The Department of Health, Education and Welfare announced that Brownell was quitting to become superintendent of schools in Detroit.

The President requested light works by American composers and some more serious pieces today as he listened to recorded music piped into his suite by direct wire from a Washington radio station.

Hagerty said Mr. Eisenhower asked for the opera "La Traviata" by Giuseppe Verdi; some symphonies by Felix Mendelssohn; a few Viennese waltzes; selections by George Gershwin and Rodgers and Hammerstein; and marches by John Philip Sousa.

Mr. Eisenhower began "catching up" on the news of the week by reading news magazines, Hagerty added.

Hagerty told reporters Dr. Isidor Ravdin, one of the civilian consultants on the President's illness, left the hospital this morning to spend the weekend at his home in Philadelphia. Ravdin, who has been at the hospital constantly since Mr. Eisenhower's emergency abdominal operation last Saturday, will return Tuesday, Hagerty said.

Second-Term Question. In the course of the second-term question, Hagerty said his statement that no politics had been discussed with Mr. Eisenhower meant just that. There was no "arrangement" to bar the subject, it "just hasn't happened," he declared.

In their morning bulletin, Mr. Eisenhower's doctors said he "had a very good night," the most encouraging language they have used thus far. They said he slept almost continuously for eight hours, his longest uninterrupted sleep.

Starting this morning, the President is being given two ounces of liquid by mouth every hour. He had no intravenous injections this morning, but Hagerty said intravenous feeding might be resumed occasionally.

Normal Used. For the first time, the word "normal" was used by itself to describe his temperature, pulse, blood pressure and respiration, instead of the phrase "essentially normal," which had been employed before to indicate slight variations.

The 8 a.m. bulletin said his temperature was 98.4 degrees, which is considered normal. This was a slight drop from the reading of 99 degrees the past few days.

Hagerty said Mr. Eisenhower had two ounces of tea at 6 a.m., two ounces of warm water at 7 a.m., and the same amount of clear beef broth at 8 a.m.

Asked by the Post-Dispatch if this was the most optimistic medical report thus far, Hagerty replied "yes." He added that last night's sleep was the longest for Mr. Eisenhower to date. His previous high was six hours.

Text of Bulletin.

Text of the 8 a.m. medical bulletin: "The President had a very good night. He slept almost continuously for eight hours. Feedings in small amounts by mouth were resumed this morning."

"His temperature is 98.4, his pulse is 78, his blood pressure is 118 over 70, his respiration is 18, all of which are normal. This, the beginning of the sixth post-operative day, finds the President in excellent spirits."

Hagerty explained that in reporting Mr. Eisenhower's day-to-day progress, the physicians do not include last Saturday, the day he was operated on. Thus, today is the sixth post-operative day.

In response to questions, Hagerty first said he did not think there would be another opportunity to interview the attending physicians. Later, however, he said the possibility of another medical press conference was not ruled out.

Medically, there were several important "milestones" as Mr. Eisenhower began his sixth full day of convalescence. Drainage Tube Removed. The drainage tube inserted into his digestive system through his nose to prevent nausea, was removed Wednesday afternoon, was left out all day yesterday and still had not been re-inserted this morning. Hagerty said he did not know whether the uncomfortable tube, which is connected to a suction pump, would be used again.

Mr. Eisenhower now is permitted and encouraged to take short walks in his bedroom, supported only lightly by an attendant, and he is experiencing progressively less discomfort from the walking.

These and other signs of improvement led newspaper men to press Hagerty for some kind of promise to submit political questions to the President. In this respect, the situation was markedly different from that in Denver last fall, after Mr. Eisenhower suffered a heart attack. At that time, there was a generally-accepted moratorium on political talk for several weeks.

This time, however, speculation on whether Mr. Eisenhower would stand by his Feb. 29 announcement that he would run again began in earnest less than a full day after the operation.

Asked by the Post-Dispatch about a report that physicians and surgeons attending Mr. Eisenhower had a sharp dispute over whether or not to operate, Hagerty declined to comment.

"There was, of course, consultation going on," he said. "There were many doctors advising. We tried to keep you as informed as we could."

Extensive Discussion. Two of the civilian surgeons called in as consultants told the Post-Dispatch there was extensive discussion among the doctors before a decision was made to operate. Mr. Eisenhower's condition was observed closely over a period of hours, they pointed out.

The consultants, who declined to be quoted by name, refused to say whether there was any disagreement. Both emphasized that the decision to operate was agreed to unanimously by all the doctors.

Hagerty said, without any amplification, that it was possible Mr. Eisenhower would convalesce at the White House after leaving the hospital. His Gettysburg (Pa.) farm has been the place most frequently mentioned for the anticipated convalescence period of four to six weeks.

WARNING ISSUED ON DANGERS AT LAMBERT FIELD

tion of military and commercial flying is required at this time at Lambert Field.

Although Freeman Albery of the Civil Aeronautics Board, chairman of the panel, emphasized it was not concerned with choosing the site of another airport, a considerable amount of testimony was given on this point.

Opposition to a proposed site near Elsberry, Mo., was expressed by Andrew J. Murphy, Louisiana (Mo.) attorney, who said he represented about 100 farm families living on or near the site about six miles north of Elsberry.

Murphy said the site on the Mississippi river flood plain was cut by drainage ditches and saved from flooding only by dikes. He said there was frequent fog in the river bottom and that the site was bordered by hills. The area proposed is good farm land whose productivity is needed, he said. He thought the establishment of a government airport there would mean a loss of school and road district taxes.

On the other hand, a group of Elsberry citizens led by Ralph Humphrey, president of the Chamber of Commerce, made a detailed presentation of the advantages of the site and assured the panel a Navy field would be welcome.

A similar difference of opinion developed over a proposed site near Vandalia, Mo., for a Navy flight strip for testing McDonnell jets. Some residents said it would mean overloading the area's schools and removal of land from the tax rolls. However, Bradford Brett, president of the First National Bank of Mexico, Mo., said a number of chambers of commerce in the general area were strongly in favor of the proposal and would give any assistance they could.

Residents of the Dardenne valley west of St. Charles, a site favored by the City of St. Louis and the Chamber of Commerce of Metropolitan St. Louis, registered objections to being removed from their homes and farms. But a representative of the Wentzville Community Club said the proposal had been endorsed wholeheartedly by that organization.

Asserting that a strong military reserve program and, particularly, a flying program, was the country's alternative to universal military training, the spokesman said accessibility of reserve training stations was a prime necessity in such a program. He said any tax loss would be offset by government contributions in lieu of taxes. He asked that local real estate experts be used as appraisers in any condemnation proceedings.

East Side Proposals.

The panel heard some proposals for sites on the East Side. James F. Cannon, executive director of the Bend-Gillespie Development Association, said a site about 45 miles northeast of St. Louis was available. He described it as about five miles long and four miles wide, and about one hour's driving time from downtown St. Louis.

At the conclusion of the hearing, Chairman Albery explained that it usually required about 60 days to draft the panel's findings and recommendations. He said the file would be held open until July 1 to permit anyone to submit briefs or other written information if desired.

RED 'HOT MONEY' INVESTED IN U.S., COMMITTEE SAYS

which he said much of the hot money comes.

Bloomfield and Fred Klopstock, chief of the Reserve Bank's balance of payments division, said the officially declared "dollar capital held by Russia or satellite countries (in the United States) is very, very small indeed."

They said known Soviet Union short-term dollar assets in this country at the end of 1955 had shrunk to $704,000 from a total of about $4,000,000. They gave no long-term investment total.

Meanwhile, they said, Swiss long- and short-term assets in this country have been rising and now total more than two billion dollars.

Bloomfield said the true source of Swiss dollar capital is often impossible to learn.

"We know the money came from people domiciled in Switzerland—we don't know if they held it for citizens of other countries," Bloomfield said.

Party Got Profits.

Mrs. Bella Dodd, a self-styled former top flight Red who said she broke with Communism in 1949, testified yesterday that undercover Communists in the past engaged in some profitable financial schemes and gave the Communist party a share of the profits.

Three of the persons whom Mrs. Dodd said yesterday she had known as Communists challenged the accuracy of her testimony. They are Hyman Forstner, assistant director of the New York State Division of Community Mental Health; Paul Rose, a New York lawyer who was administrative secretary under former New York Mayor William O'Dwyer, and Hugh de Lacy, former Democratic Congressman from Washington and now a carpenter in Cleveland.

The other was Clifford McAvoy, city welfare commissioner in the administration of the late Fiorello H. LaGuardia, mayor of New York from 1934-45.

city's share of the cost of a metropolitan transit survey, and $35,000 to finance a survey of traffic controls in the city.

The board passed a bill rezoning the west side of Union boulevard between Page boulevard and Minerva avenues for business purposes. The area is part of the site of the former St. Ann's Maternity Home operated by the Daughters of Charity. At an earlier hearing members of the order said money from sale of the property would be used to rehabilitate the old Maternity Hospital building as a home for retired nuns.

The City Plan Commission opposed the zoning change because the site is one of several under consideration for a new Children's Center. Board President Donald Gunn said the property should not be tied up while city officials take perhaps several years to make up their minds.

Civil Service Inquiry. The board adopted a resolution authorizing Gunn to appoint a special committee to investigate the city's civil service system.

avenue police station. He admitted he then chased the Noelkens to the point "where the fight started."

Mr. and Mrs. Noelken reported that the teen-agers' automobile first cut off the Noelkens' car and then alternately slowed down and accelerated, repeatedly cutting in, apparently in an effort to provoke a collision.

This began as Noelken was driving east in West Florissant avenue near Union boulevard, continued when he turned south on Grand boulevard and ended when the youths' car blocked his path in front of 3791 Lee avenue.

"What's the story, Bud?" one of the teen-agers yelled as all piled out of their automobile. Noelken went down under a hall of blows, some inflicted with a cane, he said.

With the attackers' car in front of her, Mrs. Noelken tried to read its license number. A youth who saw her doing so ripped his shirt off and covered the plate. Then the assailants' car drove off.

Noelken was in serious condition at City Hospital today with head injuries and a lacerated scalp.

In another instance of automobile-riding teen-agers' late-hour violence, two youths about 15 or 16 years old were reported early today to have criminally attacked a 31-year-old woman in South St. Louis.

The woman's purse and its scattered contents were found at the spot where she said the attack was made, in the 3400 block of Kosciuszko street, a dimly lighted area in an industrial district.

She was waiting for a streetcar at Grand boulevard and Potomac street, she reported, when the teen-agers drove up and forced her into their machine.

NEW YORK CITY HIT BY SUBWAY STRIKE

9-Hour Stoppage Caused by Dispute Over Independent Union.

The New York Herald Tribune-Paul Dispatch
NEW YORK, June 15—A subway strike on the hottest day of the year tied up more than half the city's subway system for more than nine hours yesterday. The decision to end the sudden walkout was taken early in the evening by leaders of the Independent Motorman's Benevolent Association after the Transit Authority, which operates the subway under state mandate, had waived the punitive provisions of a state anti-strike law. The law calls for the dismissal of subway strikers. The strike, which affected hundreds of thousands of New York's daily 4,500,000 subway riders, was started by two motormen in a dispute involving the recognition of the M.B.A. Crowds jammed most of the major stations and the Transit Authority threw all of its available busses into action in an attempt to ease the crisis in the 228-mile subway system. Taxicabs were almost unavailable and automobile traffic increased as drivers answered frantic calls from stranded relatives and friends. The temperature reached a record high for the day of 96.1. A number of attempts to sabotage the subways by members of the striking union were reported by the police. Strikers climbed on to the tracks at various points and pulled switches that shut off the power. Police cars were rushed to the trouble spots and restored the power quickly. The strike resulted from efforts by the M.B.A. to have itself certified as the bargaining agent for 3200 motormen, now represented by the AFL-CIO Transport Workers Union headed by Michael J. Quill. The M.B.A. demands an election, but the Transit Authority had said it cannot hold such an election until the present T.W.U. contract expires in December 1957. The M.B.A. earlier this week, announced that it would strike on June 20 to enforce its demand. The Transit Authority therefore decided to re-train a number of supervisors who formerly were motormen to prepare for the threatened strike, and yesterday's stoppage began when two motormen refused to take the supervisors out for qualifying runs.

WEST INVITED TO SEE SOVIET TROOPS QUIT RED GERMANY

BERLIN, June 15 (AP)—Soviet Marshal A. A. Grechko last night invited western leaders and the western press to watch the departure of some Red Army units from East Germany for home.

Grechko, commander in chief of Soviet forces in German, issued his invitation in an interview with the East German government news agency ADN. He said 33,500 soldiers are being pulled out of Germany under the Soviet Union's announced program to demobilize a total of 1,200,000 men. Grechko said forces being withdrawn include three air force divisions and tank, artillery and other units. He added they are taking all their weapons with them.

PROF. DENIS W. BROGAN

BRITON GIVES VIEW ON 'MONARCHIC' U.S.

Cites Extreme Interest in President's Health to Support Opinion.

The preoccupation of the American people with the health of President Eisenhower is "a curious example of the monarchic character of American government," Denis W. Brogan, professor of political science at Cambridge University, England, said here yesterday.

"I don't know whether so much concentration on one man's health is a sign of political health or not," he remarked in an interview, "but it is a fact."

Prof. Brogan, who has been a visiting lecturer and director of graduate students in recent months at the University of Illinois, said that there would be no comparable public reaction in England to the illness of a prime minister.

"No prime minister is as important to his party as Mr. Eisenhower is to the Republican party," he said, adding that the prime minister is not so much of a "one-man show" as is the presidency.

"Deputy President a Fiction." Moreover, he said, there would be no question in England on who would take over the government and the party in power if the Prime Minister were incapacitated. He explained that this was because "a deputy prime minister is not a fiction—a deputy president is."

Prof. Brogan, author of several books on politics and government, and correspondent for the Manchester Guardian and two other British publications, plans to teach for a month at Harvard University and then attend both major party national conventions this summer.

If the President is forced to curtail his activities because he is not "in first-class condition," Prof. Brogan remarked, this at least will enable him to reduce his participation in ceremonial functions.

On the other hand, he said, this would "cut into the close relationship between the American people and their President."

In England, he went on, this relationship and the public appearances it involves are the joint responsibility of the Queen and the Prime Minister.

"She does the egg-rolling," he said, "and he does the work."

Serenade for Warren. Commenting on the accessibility of American public figures compared to British leaders, Prof. Brogan recalled a recent convention he attended in Chicago. Chief Justice Earl Warren, a convention guest, was serenaded by members of the orchestra with "California, Here I Come," he related, remarking:

"I can't see them doing that to the Lord Chancellor."

On the subject of differing statements on foreign affairs questions made recently by Mr. Eisenhower and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, Prof. Brogan said when he is in England, he advises everyone "to pay no attention to anything except what the President says."

"What people in Europe don't realize," he went on, "is that it is necessary for American public officials to talk. Whether this is a psychological or institutional necessity, I don't know."

The normal attitude of friendly Europeans is summed up in a recent remark of the London Spectator—that there are many friends of Mr. Dulles who wish at times that he was tied up in a sack."

2 SOVIET MILITARY AIDS TOUR 4 MIDWEST STATES

WASHINGTON, June 15 (AP)—State Department officials said today a travel plan filed by the Soviet Embassy shows that two military aids of the embassy are now on a tour of Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Missouri.

The men were named in the schedule filed at the department as Lt. Col. Boris F. Bogatyrev, an engineer and the assistant air attaché at the embassy, and Alexander Okhapkin, office administrator for the embassy air attaché.

The two left here June 11 by air for Oklahoma City and were scheduled to travel to Enid by rail, after which they were to tour through a number of towns to Joplin, whence they were to fly back to Washington by way of St. Louis, reaching here about June 25.

Travel rights of Soviet diplomats and military officers in the United States are based on the extension of reciprocal rights by the Russians to American diplomats and officers in the Soviet Union.

Game Called, Players Missing. PANAMA CITY, Fla., June 15—A baseball game was called last night when the manager of one team noticed two of his outfielders were not on the field. Police began an immediate search for the missing outfielders, members of the Panama City state prison road camp team.

POPULATION SLOW-UP IN RESERVE DISTRICT

Bank Cites Unfavorable Birth and Death Rates, Farm Migration.

Population in the Eighth Federal Reserve District continued to grow at a slower rate from 1950 to 1955 than for the nation as a whole, the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis reported today.

In a study appearing in its June Monthly Review, the bank said that the slower growth is accounted for by the fact that the birth rate has not increased in the district as fast as the national rate, and the death rate is slightly higher. "There also has been a persistent out-migration of population from the district," the bank added.

The Eighth Federal Reserve District takes in all of Arkansas, most of Missouri and parts of Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee and Mississippi.

Decline in farm employment was singled out by the bank as one of the main forces affecting migration from the district in the last 20 years.

"For example, a study by the Missouri Division of Employment Security indicates that the percentage of cotton harvested in Missouri by mechanical pickers increased from 7 per cent in 1952 to 30 per cent in 1955. This change in production methods and others have reduced by about half in the last 20 years the number of man-hours required to raise a bale of cotton."

"Another effect of the trend of out-migration can be seen in the dampened growth of retail trade in the district," the bank added. "Retail sales in the Eighth Federal District gained less rapidly than in the nation from 1948 to 1954. While sales in the nation rose 32 per cent, the increase in the district was only 28 per cent."

BOY, 4, INJURED IN FALL FROM UPSTAIRS WINDOW

Ronald Eugene Ponds, 4 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ponds, 4049 North Broadway, suffered serious head injuries yesterday when he fell 20 feet from a rear second floor window of his home to a brick-paved yard.

Mrs. Ponds had gone to a nearby store for a few minutes when the accident occurred.

John L. Combs, a neighbor, said he heard the child scream and then heard a thud. Combs said he found the child unconscious.

GAMING AMENDMENT FOUGHT BY MISSOURI METHODISTS

KANSAS CITY, June 15 (AP)—A resolution opposing efforts to amend the Missouri Constitution to permit lotteries, raffles, and bingo was adopted yesterday by the Southwest Missouri Conference of the Methodist Church.

The resolution, adopted at the closing session of the annual conference, said the church should repudiate efforts being made to make such movements appear as crusades for civil liberties and as aids to patriotic, charitable and religious organization.

SARNOFF OPPOSES TV NETWORK CURBS

Says Regulation Would Hit at Free Enterprise — Clashes With Bricker.

WASHINGTON, June 15 (AP) —Robert Sarnoff protested to Congress yesterday that any attempt at government regulation of television networks would be a blow to the free enterprise system.

The National Broadcasting Co. president, testifying before the Senate Commerce Committee, said such regulation would be a "first step down the road" to a situation where the Government would decide what programs particular advertisers should sponsor.

Advertisers confronted with this kind of regulation would turn away from TV, he said, and the economic foundations of networks would be weakened.

However, the author of a bill to regulate networks, Senator John W. Bricker (Rep., Ohio), challenged Sarnoff on that point.

A frequent champion of free enterprise himself, Bricker told Sarnoff from the committee bench that the competitive system would remain the same with controls over networks.

The Government, Bricker noted, already regulates individual stations. He added: "The networks have the power of life or death over the station. You know that as well as I do."

"I don't think," Sarnoff replied, "that the Government would have better judgment than the networks."

He agreed with Bricker, however, that the Government should continue to regulate individual TV stations.

Bricker also has contended in a special report to the committee that NBC and the Columbia Broadcasting System have made huge profits on TV.

Sarnoff took that contention up, asserting that NBC actually lost more than $4,000,000 in its first eight years of TV operation.

Not until last year, he said, did NBC show a cumulative net profit. That cumulative figure, he said, was a "modest" $2,315,000. Net profit for 1955, he said, was $6,317,000.

Now, he went on, NBC is "taking on the heavy cost and burden of a major new development—color television."

BILL WOULD RETURN ALL ENEMY ASSETS

Senate Unit Preparing New Measure for Giving Back Property Seized in War.

The New York Times News Service, (Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, June 15 — Legislative action to return to their original owners all seized German and Japanese assets was being prepared on Capitol Hill today, in the wake of Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's visit to Washington.

The staff of the Senate subcommittee on alien property was rushing work on a new draft bill to supersede all existing legislative proposals concerning the $500,000,000 in German and Japanese assets that were seized by the United States in World War II.

Senator Olin D. Johnston, (Dem), South Carolina, and chairman of the subcommittee, said he had discussed the assets question with the chancellor Wednesday.

At his meeting Wednesday afternoon with Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, Adenauer affirmed again that the German government hoped for full return of German assets, diplomatic informants said, but the Chancellor added that if this should prove impossible at present, he fervently hoped that at least there could be early return of those assets that would benefit individual claimants.

The draft bill on which the staff of the subcommittee on alien property is working would go beyond the Administration's bill for returning only $10,000 each to individual claimants and would satisfy most of Adenauer's hopes.

However, it would open the way to retention of American control over the largest plum of all among German assets—the General Aniline & Film Corp., which is said to be worth $100,000,000 to $150,000,000.

The bill would establish the principle that if it is in the national interest to retain a particular property, it may be sold to American interests and the proceeds returned to the German owners.

USW REJECTS PAY HIKE; REPORTED TO BE 65 CENTS

'Entirely Inadequate,' Means Take-Home
Boost of 5 Cents an Hour, Union Says.

NEW YORK, June 15 (UP)—
The Big Three steel producers said today their contract offer rejected by the United Steel Workers union, called for a package increase of 65 cents an hour over the next five years.

NEW YORK, June 15 (AP)—
The United Steel Workers today rejected "an entirely inadequate" wage and contract proposals made by the "Big Three" steel firms. David J. McDonald, union president, told reporters:

"No mathematical juggling can obscure that the Steel Workers are being offered an increase in take-home pay this year of 5 cents an hour."

McDonald described the industry offer as "too little, too late and too long." He said,
"The titans of industry have labored and brought forth a louse."

"The wage offer is too little.
The fringes are inadequate and become effective too late to have any significance. And the whole contract, instead of being modernized, is to be extended, with its obsolescent features, for too long a period."

This was a reference to a suggestion by the "Big 3" firms —United States Steel, Bethlehem and Republic—for a five-year contract.

McDonald said rejection of the management offer was supported unanimously by the union's 170-member wage policy committee at a meeting this

BLAIR OUTLINES HIS PLATFORM IN GOVERNOR RACE

For Penal Modernization, Expanded Health Services and Improved Highways.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 15 —A comprehensive program for modernization of the state penal system, expanded health services and improved highways was urged here last night by Lt. Gov. James T. Blair Jr., front-running candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor.

Outlining his platform in a talk before his Kansas City supporters, Blair declared that if he is elected "there will be no deputy governors, no response to improper influences and no selfish cliques or lobbies dictating or influencing my actions."

The 54-year-old Lieutenant Governor pledged full support for the "desperately-needed" medium security prison which is to be built under a $10,000,000 appropriation financed by the state bond issue.

"If the new intermediate institution achieves, as it must, the rehabilitation of some offenders and thus reduces the percentage of repeaters, its cost will be justified," he said.

He also recommended additional personnel for the Board of Probation and Parole, to permit improved guidance for youthful first offenders.

Blair called for increased appropriations for the Division of Health to strengthen all state health services, and said he would support legislative efforts to set up an improved program for mentally retarded children.

The highway program should be expanded, he said, so that every farm in Missouri will be within one mile of a hard-surface road. Recommending that the highway patrol be enlarged from 355 to 600 uniformed officers, Blair said he believes that the number of patrolmen assigned to criminal work should be reduced so more highway safety can be achieved.

He said he favors full financing of the new public school foundation program, and increased public welfare grants "in line with present day living costs . . . but within the state's financial ability to pay the bill."

On the school integration issue, Blair said Missouri already is successfully handling that program. He added that "obvious problems still remain, but Missourians of good will are solving them with tolerance and understanding."

New Vaccine Developed to Fight Two More Respiratory Viruses

Catarrh Cases Cut Drastically at Fort Dix by Preparation Much Like Salk Polio Vaccine.

The New York Herald Tribune Post-Dispatch Special Dispatch.
CHICAGO, June 15—Another vaccine against two more types of viruses that cause respiratory illnesses akin to the common cold was described yesterday to the American Medical Association.

The anti-respiratory virus vaccine, prepared in the same way that Dr. Jonas Salk made his anti-polio shots, cut down the amount of catarrh cases among Fort Dix (N.J.) recruits to one-eleventh of the disease rate among unvaccinated recruits acting as controls for the tests.

The vaccine is similar to one announced last year—the APC vaccine—which acts against the virus infections of adenoids, pharynx and eye tissues. This virus is known as Type Three. The vaccine described yesterday contains Type Four and Type Seven of more than 14 viruses belonging to the respiratory illness class.

The vaccine was prepared by growing the viruses in monkey kidney tissue and then killing them with formaldehyde in the same way that the Salk vaccine is made.

Dr. David Bacherach Allman,

65-year-old Atlantic City (N.J.) surgeon, yesterday was named president-elect of the A.M.A. He was elected unanimously by the House of Delegates and will take office at the 1957 session in New York.

RADIOACTIVE RAIN BEYOND HUMAN TOLERANCE FOUND

SRINAGAR, Kashmir, June 15 (AP)—Scientists at a 9000-foot-high nuclear observatory in the remote Kashmir mountains reported today they had found radioactivity "slightly above human tolerance level" in rainfall collected June 3. Rainwater collected two days later showed only half as much radioactivity, they added.

The observatory, opened three years ago by American nuclear physicist Arthur H. Compton of Washington University, St. Louis, is keeping a regular watch on rainfall and clouds passing over the Kashmir Himalayas from northern Asia, and the Pacific. Scientists declined to speculate on the source of the radioactivity detected. The United States has been carrying on a series of tests at Bikini, in the Pacific, since May.

G.O.P. CANDIDATE DENOUNCES STATE DEMOCRATIC MACHINE

Special to the Post-Dispatch

KANSAS CITY, June 15 — Albert E. Schoenbeck, candidate for United States Senator, charged last night that the Pendergast-Nacy-Dwyer Democratic group "is the most ruthless political machine Missouri has ever seen."

Speaking at a dinner meeting of the Jackson County Republican Committee, Schoenbeck declared that James M. Pendergast of Kansas City, Richard R. Nacy of Jefferson City and John J. Dwyer, chairman of the St. Louis Democratic City Committee, "have set up a dictatorship which cuts to pieces any Democrat who has the courage of independent thought."

He urged Missouri voters to support President Eisenhower's call for a Republican Congress by electing a G.O.P. Senator and Representatives to replace the Democratic incumbents "who are pawns of the Pendergast-Nacy-Dwyer machine."

FTC PUTS RULES ON HEALTH AND ACCIDENT ADS

Aims to Halt 'False and Misleading' Practices in Sale of Insurance Policies.

WASHINGTON, June 15 (AP)—The Federal Trade Commission laid down stringent new rules yesterday to bar what it called "false and misleading advertising" in the billion-dollar-a-year health and accident insurance business.

FTC said the rules, which take effect July 15, are aimed at protecting the public against "harmful acts and practices" in the sale of policies.

Issuance of the rules follows a nationwide investigation begun by FTC more than 18 months ago into advertising practices in the business. The inquiry resulted in FTC complaints against 41 companies, including the largest health and accident insurers.

Five firms accepted consent orders to halt types of advertising listed in the FTC complaint. Thirty-six contended the commission lacked jurisdiction.

Decision in Test Case.
After long hearings the FTC decided 3 to 2 in a test case last April 27 that it had power under the law to regulate the companies' advertising in interstate commerce.

At issue was interpretation of the 1945 McCarran-Ferguson Act, which recognized the right of states to regulate insurance firms despite the interstate nature of their business, whenever a state adopted necessary legislation.

The FTC majority held the law was not intended "to permit insurance companies to secure new business by false and misleading advertising in interstate commerce." It reversed an examiner's ruling that the commission could act only in cases where no state law applied.

FTC Chairman John W. Gwynne and Commissioner Lowell E. Mason dissented. They said the opinion "completely ignores" what they called the intent of Congress to place regulatory power in the states. Industry statements at the time agreed with the FTC minority.

Appeal by Texas Firm.
The firm involved in the test case was the American Hospital and Life Insurance Co., San Antonio, Tex. This company on May 30 appealed the FTC decision to the Fifth United States circuit court of appeals in New Orleans. The appeal goes into the matter of jurisdiction as well as merits of the case concerning the kind of advertising used by the Texas firm.

Since its split decision the FTC has reaffirmed its right of jurisdiction by a 3-to-2 vote in other cases.

Public hearings were held April 30 on the new rules. Generally they bar an unfair trade practice the use in such insurance advertising of terms, eye-catching phrases and descriptions that might prove misleading with regard to: Benefits to purchasers, losses covered, premiums payable, extent of coverage and the like which are subject to exceptions, limitations and reductions of benefits contained in the policy but not fully explained in the advertising.

The rules also bar deceptive use of testimonials, statistics, trade names and slogans. They prohibit special introductory offers of insurance on representation the purchaser will receive advantages not available at a later date unless these are the facts.

NUDE BODY OF SECOND MISSING GIRL IS FOUND

PURCELLVILLE, Va., June 15 (AP)—The discovery of a second nude body in this rural area in less than a week has police theorizing that two girl chums were victims of foul play, but the cause of their deaths has not been determined. A fisherman yesterday found the body of a girl in Catoctin creek, a tributary of the Potomac river. She was identified as Shelby Jean Venable, 16 years old, of Laurel, Md. Last Saturday, another nude body of a girl was discovered about 10 miles away, near a Potomac bridge at Brunswick, Md. A relative identified this body as that of Mary Elizabeth Fellers, 18, of Beltsville, Md. The two girls had been listed as missing since June 1 when they were seen getting into a car near Beltsville. The area in which the bodies were found is about 45 miles from Beltsville.

PRESIDENT TO BE STRICKEN AGAIN, DOCTOR PREDICTS

St. Louis Surgeon Foresees Recurrence of Ileitis and Another Operation.

A leading St. Louis surgeon who has had much experience with patients afflicted with ileitis—the intestinal disease for which President Eisenhower had an operation last Saturday—said today it was his judgment that the President will have to have another operation for a recurrence of ileitis at some time.

Whether he will be able to carry out the duties of the office of President in the event of such a recurrence, he said, will depend on the severity of it and how long it lasts.

He will be miserable with pain, probably require hospitalization, and lose weight," the surgeon told the Post-Dispatch. He was asked to comment on the expressed view of Maj. Gen. Leonard D. Heaton, head of Walter Reed Hospital at Washington, who performed the operation, that the President's life expectancy was improved and that no further operation would be necessary.

Mr. Eisenhower's personal physician, Maj. Gen. Howard McC. Snyder, said at the same time, shortly after the operation, that it was unlikely that the President would have the disease again.

The judgment that a recurrence of ileitis is unlikely is in conflict with a standard reference work on the subject, which is used constantly by insurance agents all over the country.

This is a book titled "Risk Appraisal," by Dr. Harry W. Dingman. It says ileitis is "always serious," and continues: "Slowly, progressively, the ailment becomes chronic, about 10 per cent resulting in obstruction of various degree. Short-circuiting operations offer hope, but not much. Prognosis always dubious."

"Recurrence is distressingly high, one in three within two years. In Mayo Clinic, record of 42 recurrent cases, five were dead, 10 invalided, 27 arrested, but one had continued diarrhea of severe nature, five had nutritional disturbances, 19 had continued diarrhea of mild degree. Fact is, recurrence must be expected within two years."

It added that persons who have the disease are "sub-par in general health."

The risk appraisals were given as follows: "Life insurance possibly acceptable on 10-year endowment plan rated for 300 per cent mortality."

"Disability coverage no, positively no."

A St. Louis insurance agent explained that for anyone not familiar with the terminology of the business it would be clearer to regard the 300 figure as "points" rather than a percentage.

"One hundred is ideal, and a person is insurable up to 500," he said, adding that it was a sort of yardstick on the gate of one's health.

Question Evaded. Miss Fleeson cited the section in Dr. Dingman's book, and yesterday James Hagerty, White House press secretary, was asked to comment on it. A reporter said it raised some questions that should be answered by the President's physicians.

"It doesn't raise any questions," Hagerty said. "Miss Fleeson is not a doctor. We have tried to the best of our ability to give you the opinion of the doctors who are on the case."

When it was noted that Miss Fleeson had quoted a medical work, Hagerty said: "I can quote other doctors back."

Hagerty suggested that reporters take another look at a recent statement by Dr. Burill Crohn of New Milford, Conn., who discovered ileitis, sometimes called Crohn's disease.

Dr. Crohn said last Saturday after hearing about the President's operation: "The outlook is very good. . . . The President should be restored to full health with no diminution of his working efficiency."

The St. Louis surgeon said all of his ileitis patients were able to go back to work, but that many suffered from diarrhea.

Hagerty was asked today if less optimistic statements by other doctors failed to take into account the distinction that Dr. Heaton made between ileitis in younger people and ileitis in persons of Mr. Eisenhower's age. "You are exactly right," Hagerty said.

The reporter noted that statistical reports on ileitis are based on the younger age group most often stricken, and that the chance of recurrence is greater in young persons.

Dr. Heaton cited this as one reason why the affected portion of the small intestine was not removed in the President's case. At his age, 65, the chance of the disease recurring is considered less, the doctor said.

Dr. Snyder said last Saturday the President had previously had "transient attacks" of ileitis but did not say how long ago they began.

A St. Louis heart specialist said today ileitis has no direct bearing on a heart condition, and that consequently the President should have no reason because of his present illness to change his previous decision to seek another term.

BONN, June 15 (AP)—Higher compensation for thousands of victims of Nazi persecution won final parliamentary approval today when the Bundesrat (upper house) unanimously approved a bill providing for an average increase of 20 per cent in pensions and capital sums.

Senator Terms Gas 'Education' Drive Better Than Buttonholing

McClellan Says Testimony Shows Aim of Radio, TV and Newspaper Campaign Was to 'Influence Legislation.'

By EDWARD F. WOODS
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, June 15 — Senator John L. McClellan (Dem., Arkansas), said today that two days of hearings on the activities of the oil and gas industry against federal regulation of natural gas prices showed that so-called informational and educational campaigns might well be calculated to exert more influence on legislators than direct buttonholing.

McClellan, chairman of a special eight-man committee investigating lobbying and other attempts to influence votes in Congress, said that testimony by witnesses for the Natural Gas and Oil Resources Committee that spent $1,753,000 to "educate" the public in the desirability of federal gas price regulation demonstrated that the committee's objective was to "mold public opinion with a view to influencing legislation."

Witnesses representing the industry committee, composed of representatives of the nation's major gas and oil companies, testified that the group made no personal contacts with Senators during the Senate fight in January over the natural gas legislation.

They did, however, conduct a wide spread and well-financed propaganda and "education" program through newspapers, radio, television speeches and pamphlets. They conceded that, while they exerted no pressure on Senators directly, they had in mind that building support for their case against regulation would be instrumental in getting legislation they wanted.

Senators during the gas bill debate reported an unusually large influx of mail urging them to vote against the bill to de-regulate gas prices. Many of them, including Senator Edward J. Thye (Rep., Minnesota), a member of the lobby investigating committee, attributed it to the N.G.O. committee's "educational" campaign as well as to an outright lobbying group known as the General Gas Committee.

Under questioning by George Morris Fay, committee counsel, Bert C. Goss, president of Hill & Knowlton Inc., a New York public relations firm which organized N.G.O.'s "educational" campaign, said that before the drive began his firm's staff conducted an opinion survey on the natural gas issue and found that 36 per cent of the people they questioned thought gas prices should be federally regulated at the producer level.

The survey was intended as a test to determine the type of arguments to be employed in the propaganda campaign, Goss said.

After the campaign was going full blast N.G.O. staff members went back over the groups covered by the opinion survey and found "progress" was being made in changing public opinion on the gas matter. It was estimated that 15 per cent of those who had favored regulation had switched.

Goss said that money alone was not sufficient for a successful campaign but, certainly, one could not be carried on without money.

"If you had unlimited funds to press for any concept regulation you could put across such legislation through a public campaign, unless the legislation were obviously vicious," Fay asked.

"Yes," Goss replied, "providing your opponents also don't have unlimited funds and other resources."

Effort to Link Committees. Paul Kayser of Houston, Tex., president of the El Paso Natural Gas Co., testified that he served as vice chairman of the N.G.O.

committee during 1954 and 1955 but resigned because of the press of other duties.

Kayser said that while he was on N.G.O. it took no interest in any specific legislation but stuck to its job of trying to convince the consumers that it was to their ultimate advantage to increase exploration for natural gas supplies and that this would not take place under federal regulation.

As in questioning of previous witnesses, Fay sought through Kayser to demonstrate a link between the N.G.O. and the General Gas Committee, since both were set up in October 1954, and the same big companies had representatives on both committees.

Kayser testified that Howard Boyd, vice president and general counsel of El Paso Natural Gas, was a member of the G.C.C. at the same time Kayser was vice chairman of the N.G.O. He said, however, that he had no knowledge of any lobbying activity by Boyd and that they never discussed the natural gas bill, except that Boyd advised him from time to time on the "legal structure" of the legislation as it affected pipeline operators.

When Fay informed Kayser that records of G.C.C. showed that he was present at the 1954 meeting in New York when G.C.C. was formed, Kayser conceded that must be correct. He was hazy, however, about discussion which took place.

Kayser testified that his company contributed $14,000 to the N.G.O. campaign and listed it on its books as a business expense.

It was disclosed yesterday that some of the $800,000 worth of newspaper advertising bought by N.G.O. made reference to the "Harris bill" to exempt the natural gas producers from regulation.

Leonard F. McCollum of Houston testified that the Continental Oil Co., of which he is president, contributed $57,000 to N.G.O. and charged it to business expenses.

This prompted Senator Clinton P. Anderson (Dem.), New Mexico, who, incidentally, voted for the Harris bill, to observe that this meant that the Federal Treasury, in effect, paid 52 per cent of the committee's $1,753,000 "educational" program, since the other contributors were assumed also to have listed the contributions as business expenses. All the companies are in the 52 per cent tax bracket.

Challenges Deductions. He added that internal revenue law prohibits deductions for propaganda to promote or defeat legislation and said there was a question whether the N.G.O. contributors' deductions were legitimate. The committee recessed its hearings until next Thursday, when it will interrogate representatives of the council of Local Gas Companies, set up to fight the natural gas bill.

The bill was passed by the Senate Feb. 6 but was vetoed by President Eisenhower after Senator Francis Case (Rep.) South Dakota, disclosed that an oil company lobbyist had attempted to contribute $2500 to his campaign fund in what Case interpreted as an attempt to influence his vote on the bill.

Titled Briton Adds New Twist To Mystery of Missing Frogman

Says Lionel Crabb Wrote Him on Day He Disappeared While Diving Near Red Cruiser.

PARIS, June 15 (AP)—A mysterious new twist in the case of missing British frogman Lionel Crabb turned up today with disclosure by a titled Briton that Crabb had written him on the day he disappeared.

Crabb disappeared April 19, presumably while diving in Portsmouth harbor near the Soviet cruiser Ordzhonikidze which had brought Nikita Khrushchev and Nikolai Bulganin on their official visit to Britain.

Sir Francis Rose, who has made his home in Paris for a number of years, told a reporter the letter he received from Crabb said:

"I'll be in clover the first of the month. I've sold my invention."

The letter, Sir Francis said, was postmarked Portsmouth and dated the day Crabb dropped from sight. Sir Francis had written Crabb, who he said was an old friend, to ask for payment of a loan of £20.

Since receiving the letter, Sir Francis said, these inexplicable events have occurred:

1. After news of Crabb's disappearance was published, Sir Francis looked through his files to find the letter and turn it over to authorities, but the letter was gone. Sir Francis reported the loss to French police and to the British embassy in Paris.

2. A mutual friend in the British Admiralty appeared in Paris with a check he said represented the debt Crabb owed Sir Francis. The friend expressed the opinion, without substantiation, that Crabb was still alive.

3. On May 12, Sir Francis's son, Luis, 24, a Spanish citizen, was imprisoned by the French when he sought to have his visa renewed. Sir Francis said he attempted, through a French lawyer and through the Spanish ambassador, to determine why Luis has been imprisoned. The only thing he has been able to learn, Sir Francis said, is that Luis is being held for breach of trust.

4. High French Communist officials have approached Sir Francis, and have attempted without success to learn from him details of what has happened since he received the Crabb letter.

5. Sir Francis said he received a recent letter from Luis, now held in St. Quentin prison. Most of the letter was obliterated, but one sentence was legible: "Papa, please tell them everything you know."

JULY SOYBEANS BREAK 10C, UNSETTLE LIST

CHICAGO, June 15 (AP)—A sharp break in July soybeans toward the close upset the rest of the grain list on the Board of Trade today. July beans fell 10 cents, the daily limit, on a heavy liquidating move. This apparently was touched off by rumors some processing plants were planning to curtail soybean crushings.

Wheat had an easier tone throughout the session on precautionary selling prior to anticipated large receipts of cash wheat at Southwestern terminals Monday.

New crop corn and soybeans scored small gains early as expected rains failed to materialize in any volume in the Midwest. They fell back toward the close when July soybeans broke. Wheat closed  $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢ lower, corn  $\frac{1}{4}$ ¢ lower, oats unchanged to  $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢ lower, rye 2¢ lower, soybeans  $\frac{1}{2}$ ¢ to  $\frac{3}{4}$ ¢ lower, and lard 23¢ a hundred pounds lower.

U.S. TREASURY ISSUES STEADY IN LIGHT TRADE

NEW YORK, June 15 (AP)—Rails and convertibles led the bond market narrowly higher in late trading today. Utilities were soft. Volume was relatively light.

Fractionally higher late were General Dynamics 3 1/2, General Electric's new 3 1/2s, and Missouri Pacific Railway 5s.

United States Treasury bonds inched up 1-32 in light dealings in the over-the-counter market.

Central European and Union of South Africa dollar liens gave ground in a slightly lower foreign list.

BANK CLEARINGS.
St. Louis bank clearings for June 15 were $81,400,000 compared with $75,300,000 a year ago.

U. S. Treasury Statement, WASHINGTON, June 15 (AP)—The cash position of the Treasury June 12, 1956: balance $4,303,708,173, deposits fiscal year July $66,221,354,069, withdrawals fiscal year $68,052,363,542, total debt $276,407,700, 359*, gold assets $21,796,805, 886.

*Includes $464,947,995 debt not subject to statutory limit.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE
NEW YORK, June 15 (AP)—Foreign exchange rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents):
Canadian dollar in New York open market 1 1/2 per cent premium or 101.50 United States cents unchanged.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH Fri., June 15, 1956 3 B

TRINIDAD OIL RESPONDS TO SALE DEAL SANCTION

LONDON, June 15 (AP)—Trinidad oil shares stood out today in a stock market that drifted aimlessly.

The Government's conditional approval of Texas Oil Company's bid for control of the Trinidad Oil Company brought back the buyers and the shares gained one shilling, 6 pence to 74 shillings. This equaled the price hit when the proposed deal was first announced. Other oils turned easier. Government bonds were lower because of a lack of buyers. Dollar stocks were dull as a result of the check on Wall Street's recovery. Industrial shares were quiet and lacked a decided trend.

Administration Did Poor Job On Selling Aid Bill, 'Help Our Allies' Theme Worn Out

Real Argument Is: We Need Them More Than They Need Us—NATO Nations
Want Help to Gear to Nuclear War, Not Conventional Fighting.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS

A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright 1956, The Pulitzer Publishing Co.)

IF IN FINAL PASSAGE the foreign aid bill is substantially cut, as now seems almost certain, or if the limitation on military spending imposed in the House is left in the Administration will have to shoulder a large part of the blame.

The presentation to Congress, particularly on the part of the Department of Defense, has been pitifully inadequate. The same old record labeled "we must help our allies" has simply been played over again.

Actually a considerable part of the $4,900,000,000 requested by the White House was to start the introduction and integration of modern weapons so that the North Atlantic alliance could reshape its strategy in accord with the nuclear-missile age. Unless this is done America's European partners in NATO are going to have less and less interest in keeping land armies in being. They are all insistent on having the newest weapons.

In the foreseeable future—anywhere from two to five years—the European and North African bases of the Strategic Air Command will be vulnerable. The force that has been the chief deterrent to war will have been largely neutralized.

We Need Our Allies. A deterrent that can be substituted is to have firing sites for medium-range ballistic missiles at strategic points throughout Western Europe. That makes geography even more important than it is today in relation to the Strategic Air Command bases. It suggests the most potent argument for military aid—an argument that no one seemed to have the courage to make: Namely, that we need our allies more than they need us.

In the foreign aid bill as passed by the House a limitation of $450,000,000 was put on spending for Europe exclusive of Greece and Turkey. This is further reduction of the measure by $48,000,000 specifically marked for Spain.

The remaining $400,000,000, if the limitation is left in the bill, will have to cover hard-core spending for maintenance, plus special programs, plus administrative costs. Since it is inadequate for these purposes it cannot possibly be stretched to cover the start of planned programs to introduce new weapons for Europe. About a half billion dollars in the President's program was allocated to such weapons as missiles that call for long and costly preparation to move from the planning to the firing stage.

The NATO partners in Western Europe, with the exception of Great Britain, cannot themselves build missiles. They have become increasingly fretful at having to pay for land armies that seem to be outmoded and unlikely ever to be engaged in any future war.

Bitter Service Rivalry. One reason Administration spokesmen could not put forward an appeal for foreign military aid on the basis of a transition to the nuclear missile era is that our own armed services are engaged in a bitter rivalry over roles and weapons. There has been no fundamental revision of American strategy to accord with the revolution in the means of waging war. Until this happens the United States can hardly take the lead.

President Eisenhower has raised his voice in personal appeal. Whether it is sufficient merely to state the need is doubtful. But the serious effects of a deep cut, with all considerations of blame to one side, cannot be minimized.

Chairmen of the appropriations committees to handle foreign aid were not invited to take part in the recent White House conference on the measure, since the invitation list was confined to congressional leaders. But Passman was indignant, taking this as a personal slight. He has said, however, that he will not oppose on the House floor whatever sum the Appropriations Committee finally approves.

Chief Justice Warren Being Labeled As One of Supreme Court's 'Liberals'

Record of Last Term of Tribunal Lines Him Up With Douglas, Black.

By JAMES RESTON

The New York Times News Service.
(Copyright, 1956, by the New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON, June 15.

IF the record of the last term of the Supreme Court is a reliable guide, Chief Justice Earl Warren of California has joined what some people call the liberal, and others the "so-called liberal," wing of the nation's highest tribunal.

When the late Chief Justice Fred M. Vinson of Kentucky was on the court, Associate Justices Douglas and Black were generally regarded as "the liberal nucleus" of two. Now that nucleus, more often than not, includes the Chief Justice of the United States.

The court is unanimous in its judgment that all efforts to characterize or pigeon-hole its members into divisions of right, left and center are imprudent, hazardous, and maybe even impertinent, but the Douglas-Black-Warren dissent has been showing up so regularly in this term that it is now a subject of general conversation here, and therefore news.

For example, on June 5, the court handed down three decisions. In two of which, Warren, Black and Douglas dissented, and in the third they were joined by Associate Justice Clark.

Three Other Dissents. Last Monday, they were together in three other dissents, though in one they were joined by Associate Justice Frankfurter, and in another by Associate Justice Clark.

There was some evidence of this trend in the 1953 autumn term, shortly after the new Chief Justice joined the court, when he joined with Justices Douglas and Clark in a dissent in the Rice vs. Sioux City Memorial Park case. In this case "the three" dissented on the ground that the case raised a new question of the rights of equal protection under the law which they felt should have been decided.

Since then there have been several cases in which the Chief Justice did not join with Justices Douglas and Black in dissents, but in cases involving the First and Fourteenth amendments to the Constitution, federal-state relationships, or state or federal procedure against individuals, they have tended to be together in their opinions.

'Majority of Majority.' In at least seven major decisions in the last term of the court, the Chief Justice and Justices Douglas and Black were the only dissenters, and as Robert K. Walsh of the Washington Star has pointed out, this trio was "the majority of the majority" in the court's rulings on several occasions.

Thus, in 5-4 decisions of the court, the switch to Warren from the late Chief Justice Vinson, who did not usually join the Douglas-Black dissents, has, on several occasions, resulted in Warren's throwing the decisive vote to the liberal wing.

In addition to the seven major dissents in which the Warren-Black-Douglas group stood alone, they were together in at least five others, either with Associate Justice Clark or Associate Justice Frankfurter.

"The three" dissented, either as a group or with other justices in decisions which held

Exiled Cyprus Leader Urges New Approach

British Reaction Negative to Bid for Reopening of Negotiations.

By DREW MIDDLETON

LONDON, June 15.

ARCHBISHOP MAKARIOS, exiled spokesman for Cypriot independence, declared yesterday that the issue of the island's future could be solved only by negotiation.

The leader of Cypriot forces seeking eventual union with Greece asked the British government to abandon force and adopt a "cooler and wiser" approach to the problem.

The archbishop gave his views in a letter to Francis Noel-Baker, Labor member of Parliament. It was the first direct comment by the Archbishop on the situation in Cyprus since his deportation to the Seychelles in March.

The government's reaction to this apparent bid for the reopening of direct negotiations was negative. Its antipathy to Makarios has two causes.

First, the British believe that in negotiations last winter, the Archbishop repeatedly raised new barriers to agreement whenever a settlement seemed in sight.

Second, Makarios has not disavowed support of Eoka, the national organization of Cypriot fighters.

Ignorance British Objections. Makarios did not deal directly with either of these points in his letter. He insisted that restoration of law and order, Britain's present objective, would not solve the problem.

The archbishop blamed "mistaken policy" of the British government for the present situation in Cyprus.

The gap between the British and Greek Cypriot views was not wide, he asserted, and a little good will could have bridged it. His exiles, Makarios asserted, had made a solution more difficult.

He said Britain's refusal last winter to agree to a Greek majority in the proposed legislative assembly "represented the biggest difference" between the two parties. The explanation of the British stand, he added, was unsatisfactory.

The British position on that point was given by Alan Lennox-Boyd, Colonial Secretary, in debate in the House of Commons on March 5.

As the British saw it, Len-

Whether H-Bomb Missed Target At Bikini Is Now Being Discussed

Air Force Spokesman Is Noncommittal and AEC Is Silent—Some Put Margin of Error at 3500 Yards.

By ELTON C. FAY

WASHINGTON, June 15 (AP).

THE AIR FORCE had only a noncommittal reply today to questions about whether the B-52 which dropped a hydrogen bomb over Bikini last month missed the target.

The Atomic Energy Commission had nothing to say. Reports that the big bomb was wide of the intended point of burst in midair have become current in recent days. They apparently come directly or indirectly from persons who saw the target point after radioactivity had diminished in the area.

Some speculation places the margin of error in excess of 3500 yards from the place above Namu island where the explosion was intended. That's about two miles.

Air Force Statement. In response to a question, an Air Force spokesman said: "The recent thermonuclear air drop at Bikini was conducted as scheduled."

"The Air Force considers that the ability of the B-52 bomber to deliver a thermonuclear bomb was demonstrated successfully."

"Detailed information about the distance and altitude of the explosion in relation to the target is considered classified (secret) information under the provisions of the Atomic Energy Act."

An error of even 3500 yards might not be serious in an actual wartime drop of a weapon which has a major destructive force extending out to at least 12 miles from the point of burst.

But under the precise conditions set up for the Pacific test it could be disturbing. Recording instruments—cameras, pressure recording gadgets, light analyzing instruments—are oriented carefully on the intended point of burst. If an explosion occurs elsewhere, some vitally needed information would be lost. "The constitution would provide for an elected majority in the legislative assembly and would safeguard the interests of all sections of the community."

Turks' Reaction Big Factor. The British position was influenced by concern over Turkish reaction. The Turkish government requires, at a minimum, guarantees for the political and religious freedom of the Turkish Cypriot minority.

When self-government is established. Makarios charged that the

FLEESON Senators Forcing Eisenhower To Bear Responsibility for Aid

By DORIS FLEESON

WASHINGTON.

THE PURPOSE of Senate maneuvering on foreign aid is to force President Eisenhower to take full responsibility for whatever amount is approved.

The White House is putting pressure on the Senate to restore all or at least the greater part of the one billion the House cut from the Administration bill. Dissatisfaction both with the bill itself and with White House management of it is widespread on both sides of the aisle.

Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson and Republican Leader William F. Knowland are not directly co-operating with one another, though that is the net effect. Each is working with Senators of his own party to put the monkey squarely on the President's back.

They feel amply justified in doing so. In a changing world situation, the President is only continuing along the old paths in foreign aid and asking for more money to do it.

Voter Complaints. This tactic has decidedly failed to capture public imagination or communicate a sense of urgency to people. Instead, voter complaints are pouring into Congress. The old isolationist sentiment, always latent, is represented, but internationalist Senators have warned the White House that there is much more to the problem than that.

They warned presidential assistant Sherman Adams early this week that the Administration had not made its case for the restoration of the House cuts. When nothing happened, Senator Johnson openly, and Senator Knowland by indirection, began to put this argument before the country.

The President injured his position, too, by his flat refusal to help Senator Alexander Wiley against the Wisconsin isolationist organization at home, which has refused to

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Where There Is No Peace

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
The purported text of Khrushchev's secret speech to the stereotype Communist party of Russia is true. He admits that 7669 persons were framed and condemned since 1954, and he could have added several millions more if he had gone back as far as the Kronstadt sailors.
The sickening thought is that out of 200,000,000 Russians there was not an organized corporal's guard to stand up against these monstrous crimes.
The Stalin state waged war against its own people throughout its existence, and Khrushchev, the successor, by his own words is continuing the same process.
First it was the Republicans, the Social Democrats, the social revolutionaries, the libertarians, then Trotsky; then in quick order Kamenov and Zinoviev, Radek, Piatakov, Preobrazhensky, Bukharin.
Now Beria is the scapegoat. Always a scapegoat—like Molotov and Malenkov, who are kept on ice.
The Bolshevik self-criticism is the "confession." The Bolo goes through a ritual of self-debasement; the secretaries take it all down and it goes into a dossier. That is his resignation in advance, frequently his death warrant.
Have patience, Khrushchev is still comparatively young....
Remember, there is also the directive of the expendable. The devil can order the non-conformist or "unreliable" to suicidal or impossible tasks. Then it becomes not a murder but an event or incident.
Yes, the Russian state is constantly at war with its own people. How can it export the commodity of peace when it doesn't exist in their own land? Is that why they now hide behind Nehru and again propose the "people's front" with the Socialists and liberals?
To think there are Americans, a few it is true, who pay homage to these dictators of all the Russians, the potentates of the biggest falsehood in history, the manipulators of the party slaves beyond the seas.
These minions look toward the east and see a star. We look hard in the same direction and initially see a mirage, then the ghost of Torquemada.
GERRY ALLARD.
Springfield, Ill.

Ike's Illness Occupational?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
Two questions are very prominent before the public at this time:
1. Will President Eisenhower's physical condition be an issue in the coming campaign?
2. Should it be an issue?
To my mind the following excerpt from the June 1 issue of U. S. News & World Report, which is a very strong supporter of Mr. Eisenhower, and the Republican administration, is quite significant:
"Strain, irritation preceded Mr. Eisenhower's latest illness. Policy abroad was under fire in Congress. Defeat followed the President's personal appeal for a full 4.9 billion in an appropriation for foreign aid. A furor was kicked up among some allies when Eisenhower defended neutral nations. Two setbacks in one day came before the rest of the new illness. President Eisenhower does not like either to lose or to make mistakes. Things have not been going so smoothly of late. Irritation resulted. Irritation, tension, anger are conditions that doctors prefer not to have develop in persons who have suffered heart trouble."

The Displaced Farmer

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
The new Express Highway has taken our farmer's market at Broadway and O'Fallon streets. We were promised a new site. Thousands of people came to buy from our farmers, and were well satisfied. On a Friday night you could hear any language spoken. We liked our customers, they liked us.
Now we can't get a permit to sell our produce. Every time we get a new site established, we are out. We don't like prejudice or nicknames, but that seems to be our lot. What have we done to deserve such treatment?
HARRY STEINMANN, President
Farmers and Gardeners Association of St. Louis County.

History Before Cyprus

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I am writing this letter to express my open-mouthed admiration for the gallant British.
They never give up the old, tried and true methods of doing things, even if experience has shown them to be impractical.
Take, for example, their method of dealing with participants in revolutions against the British in their dominions.
Sir William Wallace was executed for his part in leading the Scots against the English. Scotland was not subdued for 500 years.
Nathan Hale was executed for spying in the American Revolution. The Americans were not subdued, period.
And so it goes.
Is it not a safe assumption that the execution of certain Cypriots might simply give the rest of the Cypriot resistance martyrs to use against the British?
Nathan Hale and Sir William Wallace probably were just as useful to their respective countries martyred as they were alive.
Might that not be the case with the two executed Cypriots and the one now condemned?

New Bloomfield, Mo.

The Fraud Convictions

One of the most notable of trials involving high level Government officialdom has resulted in the conviction of Matthew J. Connelly and T. Lamar Caudle, Mr. Connelly, who was White House appointments secretary to Harry S. Truman, and Mr. Caudle, assistant Attorney General and head of the tax division in the Justice Department in the Truman Administration, have been found guilty by a federal jury in St. Louis of conspiring to defraud the Government.
The verdict is one that will be received in conflicting ways. Some people will regard it as a miscarriage of justice, begun as a partisan attempt to smear the Truman Administration. Others will see it as full vindication of the personal efforts of Chief Judge George H. Moore to stir the Department of Justice into action against influence peddling when Mr. Truman occupied the White House.
A jury of four women and eight men from rural Missouri deliberated for nine hours. Undoubtedly there were a good many ballots and, in fact, one of the jurors said there were "more than five or six." This in itself indicated areas of disagreement. When the jury returned its verdict of guilty it was supported of course by all 12 members.

Judge Hulen, in whose court the case was tried, took a position that limited the scope of the indictment. He directed the jury to disregard that portion of the indictment which charged that the defendants conspired "to commit bribery and perjury, make false statements and violate the Corrupt Practices Act."
As Judge Hulen summarized the charge for the jury to consider it was that the defendants—Harry I. Schwimmer, Kansas City lawyer, was excused while the trial was in progress because of illness—"allegedly conspired to defraud the United States of faithful and unbiased judgment in their official capacities."

In other words, the case before the jury was that Caudle and Connelly had, as a consequence of taking such gifts as oil royalties and clothing, conspired to deprive the Federal Government of public service with the character and integrity that the Government must have in its officials.

This was in the case of Irving Sachs of St. Louis, who was fined $40,000 on pleading guilty to evading $128,721 in income taxes. Sachs was excused from going to prison on the grounds that his health was impaired and it was in connection with this that much testimony was presented.

Very few will argue that Messrs. Caudle and Connelly were doing only what they should have done. They had no business taking gifts from those interested in income tax cases. Givers of gifts in such situations either seek to influence results or they are expressing their appreciation for what has happened. It is one or the other, as those who take the gifts know.

If Messrs. Caudle and Connelly believe that they have been unfairly convicted the avenue to appeal is open to them. The Federal Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court exist largely to review the work of the lower courts.

As for the era in which these acts took place, there can be no question about its corrupt aspect. And there can be no question that Lamar Caudle was out of bounds as a Department of Justice official time after time. He sought to block the grand jury investigation of tax fixing when James P. Finnegan was Collector. He called off an FBI inquiry into the 1946 vote thefts in Kansas City. He speculated in oil with Frank Nathan and then approved the dismissing of a charge of black marketing in sugar against Nathan. After these facts came to light Harry S. Truman personally fired Caudle.

None of these latter matters were at issue in the St. Louis trial. The St. Louis trial related only to the handling of Irving Sachs's evasion of taxes. On that alone T. Lamar Caudle and Matthew Connelly now await sentencing. The whole story is a sorry and deeply depressing one.

Mystery of Dr. Galindez

The disappearance of Dr. Jesus de Galindez in New York three months ago would arouse the interest of an international whodunit—under other circumstances.

Dr. Galindez, as Marquis W. Childs reports, was a refugee from the dominion of Rafael Trujillo in the small Dominican Republic. Dr. Galindez was working on a book exposing that despotism, as part of studies at Columbia University, when he vanished. He may have been assassinated, for this is believed to have happened to other Dominican refugees. Or there may be another explanation for the disappearance. The New York police after much hard work still do not know what happened.

Under what other circumstances would this affair amount to an international incident? If Dr. Galindez had been a refugee from some Communist state, as Mr. Childs observes, the Justice Department would swing into all-out action, the FBI would be hot on the trail and congressional committees would be heard from galore. So far activity in behalf of Dr. Galindez has caused hardly a ripple.

Yet the same principles of political exile and safe refuge are involved in the case of this citizen of a tiny state as in the case of any defected foreign Communist who has been a star performer in Washington. Preoccupation with Communism should not cause the Government to forget that tyranny can exist in many forms.

To Protect Raccoons—and Dogs

Many Missouri animal-lovers will be glad to hear the decision of the State Attorney General's office that "coon-on-a-log" is illegal and punishable by a jail term if either the raccoon or a dog that attacks it is injured. F. L. Howard, assistant attorney general, wrote the opinion.

Several readers of the Post-Dispatch wrote letters to the editor in protest after pictures of "coon-on-a-log" appeared in PICTURES, the Sunday rotogravure section, April 22. Reader Grace Conahan of Webster Groves denounced the practice as "heartless cruelty" to the animals and degrading to the human beings who performed it. She called the legal turn by asserting, as Mr. Howard does now, that "coon-on-a-log" is outlawed by a statute against baiting or tormenting animals. Reader Wayne E. Roper of Collinsville called the practice "sadistic."

For the complaint that resulted in the opinion from the Attorney General's office, D. W. Sherman, Jr., prosecuting attorney of Lafayette County, deserves the credit. As he explained "coon-on-a-log" a raccoon is tied to a log in the middle of a small lake or pond, and dogs are turned loose in time trials to see which can most quickly get the raccoon off the log and into the water. Men waiting nearby in a boat separate the animals. Nevertheless, the raccoon can be permanently injured and Mr. Sherman said it was possible for a dog to lose its sight. As a result of aroused public opinion, anyone in Missouri who practices "coon-on-a-log" from now on will be doing so at his own considerable risk.

Questions for Steel

The steel industry is discovering all kinds of reasons why it should have a large price increase this year. It is expecting a wage increase. If not a strike. Its raw material prices have gone up. Its freight costs have gone up. Its products have historically been "under-priced." It needs a greater earnings base in order to finance expansion. And so on.

There may be merit in some of these claims, but the public is not in a position to judge. For the public is getting only one side of the story, as presented by the steelmakers. Nobody is subjecting the steel men to cross-examination. Nobody is presenting the case against a price increase.

For instance, searching questions ought to be asked about the industry's claim that it must have much higher prices in order to attract the capital necessary to finance future expansion.

How much difficulty has the industry actually experienced in attracting capital? How much of its plant expansion in the past has actually been financed by going to the public for capital, and how much has been financed from retained earnings? The industry has just undergone a great expansion, much of it paid for by the government through tax allowances; why is not the increased efficiency and profit-making power of this new plant sufficient to finance the future expansion still needed? If steel's present profits are inadequate, just what would be adequate?

This is the kind of question somebody should be asking, for if steel prices rise sharply again this year, all industrial prices will be affected. The pyramided results could be far more inflationary than the forces the Federal Reserve Board is trying to check with its current credit restrictions. From its own point of view, steel may have reasons for whooping up prices. But from the public point of view there may be equally good reasons on the other side.

Who is going to present the public's case? The Administration has no formal power to fix steel prices, but as the representative of the public it ought to call in the steelmakers, require them to justify their price plans, and counsel restraint in the public interest. The decision is too big and too freighted with national welfare to be left entirely to the leaders of the steel industry and their public relations men.

In Response to the President

President Eisenhower's appeal on behalf of his foreign aid program has already borne some fruit. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee has voted to restore $600,000,000 of the more than a billion cut from the aid by the House.

This committee action, which was by a vote of 9 to 5, is not of course passage in the Senate. Nor does it provide the restoration of the full amount as President Eisenhower asked when he said that the cut would "undermine NATO." But it is a step in the right direction. And there is strong reason to believe that it was influenced by the appeal from Mr. Eisenhower.

This time the Republicans on the committee cast more votes than the Democrats in support of the President. Senator Knowland of California, an outspoken critic of the Eisenhower foreign policy, offered the amendment to increase the House approved foreign aid sum.

As voted, all the increase is for military aid. We trust that further consideration will result in a better break for economic assistance and expert help which doubtless will come nearer meeting the new look of the Soviets.

New Moon After Red Sunset?

As soon as we heard of Trader Lane's latest deal, we scanned the sky over the ballpark for a new moon. Didn't Wallie Moon quickly dry the Slaughter tears with his first-time-up homer? Balm out of the same can might assuage the pain of Red Schoendienst's departure for the feshpots and Polo Grounds of New York. We could not see even a silver sliver, but Mr. Lane may have a strong telescope.

If the eye saw nothing, the ear heard plenty. The eight-player deal was the Cardinals' biggest in years, but the talk was mostly about one man—the graceful Redhead, most efficient of second-basers. St. Louis likes that man, and not only because he and Mural were the only Redbirds still trailing wisps of pennants.

Alvin Dark, who comes from the Giants to Busch Stadium, also is 33. His world series experience is more recent than Red's, and we have heard no rumors about his eyes. His batting average in this young season is only .252 against Schoendienst's .314, but he may get it up to his lifetime figure of .295. And the Cardinals do need an active man in the middle.

A little more good pitching could reduce their fielding anxieties. In swapping Littlefield for Liddle, Lane may have found it. Putting Whitely Lookman on first and sending Moon back to the outfield hardly is a sacrifice—unless some day young Jackie Brandt should look like the horseshoe-nail which might have secured another pennant. Nor will there be a hubbub over the Sarnoff-Katt trade if young Smith makes it irrelevant.

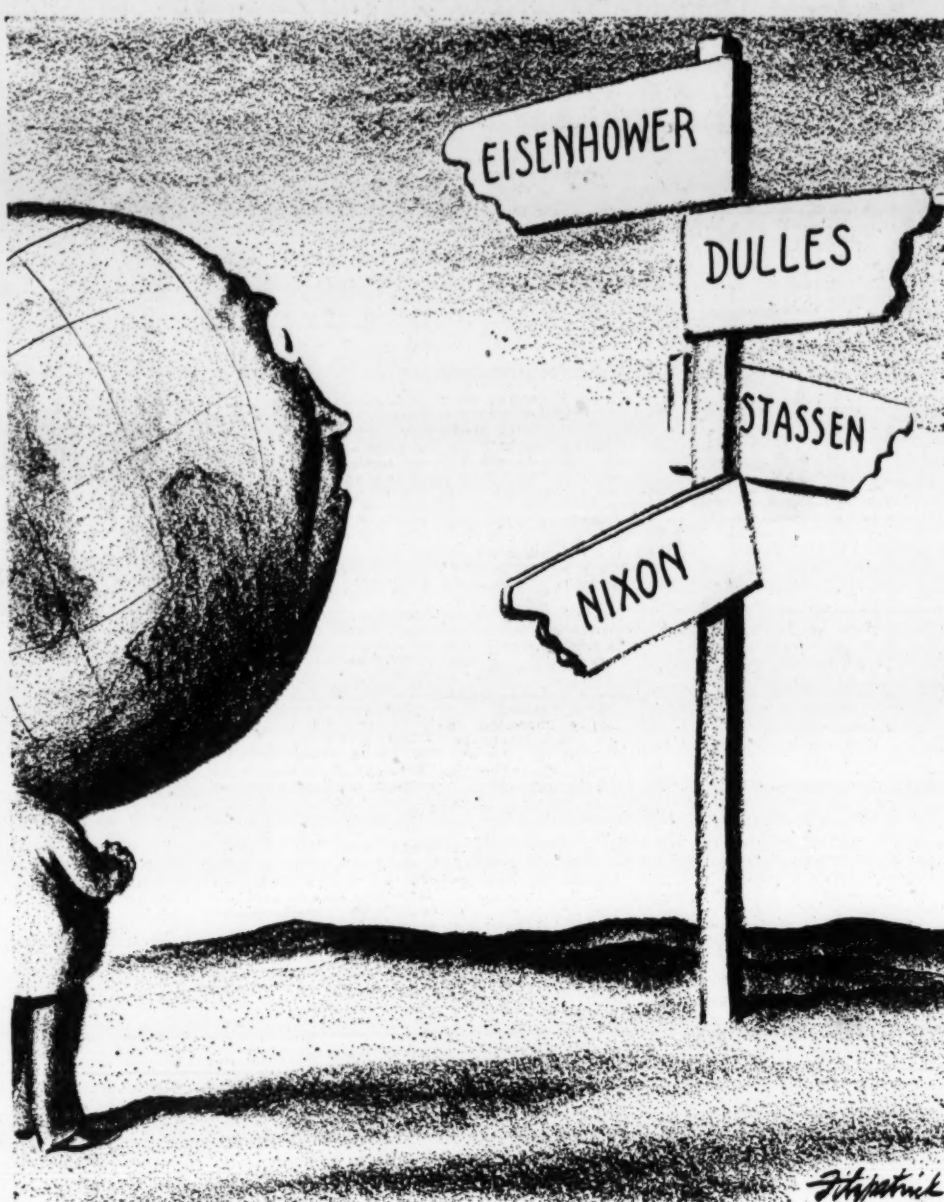

The Supreme Court twice ruled that baseball is not a business. Nobody knows that better than Frank Lane. It is a game. And in a game a winner is like a customer in a department store: he is never wrong. The Giants can hardly regard this transaction as an act of charity; but if the Cardinals remain pennant contenders, everybody will praise Frank Lane's shrewdness. All the same, it is sad-making not to see the Redhead pivot in those double plays, or greet a new pitcher by shifting to the other side of the plate.

Polio Prevention, a Public Job

The American Medical Association is at war with the Government again. This time it is demanding that the Eisenhower Administration stop its free anti-polio vaccine program.

The organized doctors use such words as "bizarre," "inequitable" and "unscientific" in condemning the program, but they let the same old rabbit out of the hat when they complain of interference with medical practice and assert that the vaccine should be kept in commercial hands. Diagnosis: recurring pain in the purse.
There was cause to complain about the half-baked way in which the Government started the vaccination program, but that fiasco now is history. The Medical Association's new complaints do not stand up. Polio cannot be left to the uncertainties of private practice. It is an epidemic which calls for prevention even more than for cure. And that is a public health job.

Just as in the case of small pox, malaria and other plagues, the community has a right and a duty to protect itself. Only public authority has enough scope for the prevention of epidemics. And it is proper that the community should pay for community protection.

GUIDE TO U.S. FOREIGN POLICY

Learning From the Depression

Financial editor recalls what happened in the Hoover administration during the depression; sees signs of possible trouble now and also political exploitation; Truman used issue in 1948 presidential campaign; G.O.P. in "delicate position."

William H. Grimes in The Wall Street Journal

The depression of the 1930s left its mark on every segment of the American social structure. Nowhere has the depression's impact been so marked as on American politics.

That depression began early in the presidential term of Mr. Hoover and while the Republicans were in control of Congress. It reached its lowest point during the closing days of Mr. Hoover's Administration.

It was almost inevitable that the Republicans would suffer defeat in 1932. They did not return to power for 20 years. Even in 1948, when there had grown up some millions of voters who had not experienced the depression of the '30s, Mr. Truman could still arouse fears that a Republican rule meant an economic decline. His campaign along that line resulted in his surprising election to the presidency.

Not only did the depression bring the Democrats into office. It enabled the Democratic party under the leadership of Mr. Roosevelt to put into influential positions men and women whose economic philosophy represented a sharp break with the American tradition; people who were in greater or lesser degree advocates of government intervention and control of those social and economic functions which had been considered in the domain of the individual.

Neither party can ever forget that another economic decline, or even the serious threat of one, might result in the Democrats' again coming to power with the modern "liberals" in places of influence.

It would be an overstatement perhaps to say that the Democrats hope for such a decline. It is hard to think that any group is that callous. Rather their attitude is like that of one Zeb Jones. In Zeb's small town there was a lady whose sharp tongue was just one indication of how the milk of human kindness had left her veins. One day the lady's house burned down and a neighbor remarked to Zeb that it was too bad. "Yes," Zeb agreed, "that was a fine old house. But if there had to be a fire in town and if somebody's house had to burn, then I say it couldn't have happened to a more deserving person."

Well, nobody wants a fire. But fires do occur. And sometimes—the old adage to the contrary notwithstanding—there is smoke and no blaze. When fire or smoke are visible, the Democrats, acting as politicians, act, point the finger at the Republicans. And the Republicans, reacting as politicians react, win.

In the campaign of 1932 Mr. Eisenhower was quite conscious of the charge that the Republicans were the party of depression. So he said on several occasions that the Government would not let a depression happen.

In the congressional elections of 1954, when there had been a slight decline in economic activity, the Democrats were on the attack and the Republicans were defending.

Again in 1956 the approach of an election coincides with a period when the extraordinary level of production and employment of 1955 and early 1956 shows signs of slackening off. The Democrats will make the most of it. Republican fears have been aroused.

Already the Democratic orators are on the stump telling the farmers and the laid-off workers in the automobile plants that they are the victims of an Administration concerned only with the health of big business. The Republicans are replying with statistics.

How much effect will all of this talk, which will increase in volume as the election approaches, have on the course of business? Probably very little, providing it remains talk.

There is not much evidence that the country can be talked out of a depression. Certainly some of the most expert talkers tried through the '30s without effect. Neither is there evidence that the country can be talked into one.

In 1946 there were forecasts of doom—the 8,000,000 unemployed and like predictions. The country paid no attention.

In 1954 the pace of economic activity began to mount while the campaign orators were sounding off that things were on the way to being very bad unless the Government took action immediately.

Actions not words affect the economy. And it is the Republicans who are in position to act or, what may be as important, to withhold action. It is a delicate position.

Already we see a conflict over monetary policy. The Federal Reserve has taken steps to counter what it believed to be an inflationary trend. Economic considerations ruled in the board's determination.

Some of the advisers of President Eisenhower have differed sharply with the board. These advisers are conscientious men and their objections to the board's decisions surely were not based on purely political grounds.

But neither are these presidential advisers superhuman and they cannot forget that they are serving a President running for re-election.

It may very well be that there is approaching another conflict in policy where economic and political considerations will be so interwoven that it will be difficult to tell which is which: where the policy-makers themselves will be uncertain of their own motives.

If the Treasury surplus comes up to the predictions of something approaching two billion dollars, or if, as may very well happen, it substantially exceeds that figure, there might be a very great temptation to abandon the policy of applying the surplus to the debt and to stimulate a slightly lagging economy with a shot of tax reductions.

21 Years of Darkness

OUT OF MY DARKNESS, by William Sheppard, in collaboration with Fritz Block. (Friedrich Fall, 241 pp., $1.75.)

For 21 years William Sheppard was blind. That was his darkness. It was not that he had never known the light. For eight years of his childhood he had had sight. The remembrance of that was sweet, but it did not help him in his darkness. It, however, kept alive the hope that he would see again, and encouraged him in his efforts to solve the problems that confronted him in the darkness. He learned how to provide for himself and found romance and marriage. Always with him was the hope that he would one day see his wife and child. Through the miracle of modern surgery, the transplantation of live corneas to his dead eyes, he came out of his darkness and into new light.

William Sheppard has told his story, the story of his 21 years in darkness, for the encouragement of others who are handicapped, a bequest of the courage and fortitude that enabled him to see his way through the darkness into the light, and also for the guidance of the favored in understanding the physically handicapped. It is filled with gentle rebuke for those who, with the best intentions, segregate the handicapped, hedge them about with restrictions, burden them with unwanted or unneeded help, lavish upon them sympathy that is undesired in place of the fellowship that they crave.

It is also the hope of Mr. Sheppard that many persons may be induced by reading his story to donate their corneas for possible use by others when they no longer need them.

As for William Sheppard, now that he can see again, he feels like three different people. First, a kid who had lost sight and took it for granted; second, like a person who for 21 years lived in a world of darkness; third, like a person whom God blessed with new vision. He is still trying to get used to this new world. One of the hard things he has to get used to is that in his new world there is ugliness as well as beauty.

During his years in darkness he chose to remember only what was beautiful in the world of light that he had known until he was 8 years old. It came as something of a shock to him when at the age of 29 he re-entered the sighted world that there was ugliness which had been there all the time but which he had forgotten. It is now his hope that the beauty of the world will grow as the seeing people around him will increasingly put into practice the beautiful things that he learned from his years of darkness.

Civil War Tale of Action

JUBILEE, by John Brick (Doubleday, 320 pp., $1.95.)

Among the many recent fictional treatments of the Civil War, Mr. Brick's long, full novel has a clear place of its own, an honest, well-meshed narrative which builds gradually to a strong conviction of reality. It takes some time to get under way, but the wise reader will hold with it and find that it picks up steadily in story interest and tension.

This is the tale of Jeff Barnes, West Point graduate and organizer of the 195th New York Volunteer Infantry from the Hudson Valley country. He serves at Gettysburg under General Sherman, a man in whom he has a vivid faith, and in time becomes a general in his own right. Eventually the historic "march through Georgia" is part of the tightening suspense and the drama of a well-told story.

Mr. Brick does not over-pile his detail; he is a selective writer, and he can catch in a scene with an impressive highlighting of the essential point, the major note to be stressed. He has a love plot, which is not a dominant one. "Jubilee" is, instead, a book of strong action, with something to say of war's seaminess, its bitter brutalization, its development of men's other characteristics which are not always apparent on the surface.

The author's Sherman is a highly colored, violent figure, one to be remembered for his pell-mell, roaring actions in charge of the Western forces of the Union.

'Retired and Happy' Men Tell Researchers

From Scientific American

The notion that retirement makes a person discontented is contradicted by an interdepartment study now in progress at Cornell University.
Three-fourths of about 700 recently retired men indicated that they are satisfied with their new way of life and are generally in good health, according to a report by Gordon F. Streib and Wayne E. Thompson of the department of sociology and anthropology.
The survey began in 1952 when 2000 men around age 65 answered questions about their plans for the future and how they felt about retirement. Two years later, those of the group who had retired were asked how they had adjusted to their new routines.
Most of the men had looked forward to retirement, and all but one-sixth of these have enjoyed it. And two-thirds of those who did not like the idea of retirement when they filled out the first questionnaire are nevertheless content to have stopped working.

Generally speaking, those who are content with retirement were financially secure and had plans for the future.

WALTER LIPPMANN

The Question of Disability

WASHINGTON. M. R. ADAMS and Mr. Hagerty would not be human if they were not thinking at all about how this second illness will affect the election. But they have, presumably, had something more immediate in mind during the first few days.

They have been at great pains to establish the fact that in the technical sense of the word the President is not disabled, that he is able "to discharge the powers and duties" of his office. To do this, they have brought him official documents to be signed and decisions to which he could say Yes or No. They have been applying the lessons they learned from the first days of the Denver period. As it happened then, not only Messrs. Adams and Hagerty but the Attorney General as well were away on vacation when the President was stricken. For a few days there was the greatest uncertainty both as to how badly the President was disabled and as to whether or not, and in what degree, the Vice President was supposed to act.

Heart Attack Lessons. But when, later that week, Mr. Adams and Mr. Brownell had returned to Washington, they took a very important decision. They decided that the President, though he could not then do any serious work, was not in the legal sense disabled. This meant that there need be no delegation of substantial power to the Vice President, and that in fact a regency consisting of the White House staff and the senior Cabinet officials would be able to administer the office of the President.

Last week, they applied the same decision as to how to carry on during the President's illness. Having learned from experience, they did not allow the question to arise as to whether the President was disabled and unable to discharge his power and duties.

No Settled Law.

There is no settled law as to what is to be done when the President of the United States is ill. Congress has been trying, rather listlessly and not very diligently, to write such a law. It is not an easy thing to do.

One of the main difficulties is that there is no objective, no black and white distinction between being able and being disabled. There are variations all the way from being somewhat below par to being helpless. In the President's case, for example, the ability to sign a few documents is for legal purposes sufficient proof that, though in fact he cannot do any serious work, he is not disabled. It would be impossible to write a law which looked behind these formalities. For who could be given the power to look behind the formalities?

How far in fact, apart from the formalities, the President is able to administer his office is not a legal question. It is a political question. In a formal sense a President who can sign documents brought to him is administering his office.

People Know Better. During an illness and a period of convalescence, this formal and legal view is sufficient and it cannot be effectively challenged. But the country will have no illusions about it. It will realize that until the President has recovered, he will not be discharging the real responsibilities of his office.

Miss Bess C. Cragen and Miss Grace C. Clark, who are retiring this year after many years as teachers in the East St. Louis public school system, were honored yesterday at Webster school, 918 St. Louis avenue, East St. Louis.

Miss Cragen has been principal of Webster school since February and has taught there for 45 years. Miss Clark has taught at Webster for more than nine years. Previously, she taught at Hawthorne and Longfellow schools.

Board of Education members and school officials attended the ceremonies yesterday at which the two teachers were presented with gifts and plaques commemorating their years of service. Each is 70 years old.

450 RUSSIANS VISIT CAPRI, BECOME TYPICAL TOURISTS

CAPRI, Italy, June 15 (AP)—Soviet tourists romped around Capri yesterday buying wine, gazing at the Blue Grotto and photographing the Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

Some of the 450 members of Russia's biggest tourist sortie into the West spotted the Windsors as they emerged from a hotel. The pursuing Russians appeared put out when the Duke and Duchess went into a shoe shop to hide.

26 ARTISTS DISPLAY WORKS AT LIBRARY

Prairie Print Makers' Exhibit Characterized by Familiar Themes.

The Prairie Print Makers' twenty-sixth annual exhibition, which will be on view in the art room of Central Public Library through June 30, is characterized by conventional, easy-on-the-eye treatment of familiar themes.

There are portraits of Indians, pictures of birds and western landscapes, lithographs of grain elevators, lobster pots and lighthouses. The works of art bear an obvious relationship to their title, and no great strain on the viewer's imagination.

Samuel Chamberlain's "Towers of Senlis," a dry point, and his "Cathedral of Senlis" are done with marked care and attention to detail. They are among the few in the show, which has 50 prints by 26 artists, that venture outside this hemisphere for their subject-matter.

Effective Study. Others are two prints by Leslie Cope, whose "Compton Wharf" is an etching of an English coastal village and whose "Evening Shadows," a dry point, is a very effective study of three plow horses coming down a road. Stow Wengenroth's "Marshall's Point" and "Hidden Cove," both lithographs, are skilfully handled pictures of a lighthouse and fishing wharf, respectively. The depiction of a sun-whitened walkway leading to the lighthouse is particularly appealing.

"The Shipwreck" by Clare Leighton, shows a vessel foundering in heavy seas as men watch from shore. "In the Beginning," by the same artist, gives an impression of mystery and primordial force. A vision of a vast, swirling sea, with the moon and stars shining. Both pictures are wood engravings.

Western Scenes. There is a great deal of appeal in the western scenes. These include Arthur W. Hall's "Ponies Alert," Charles B. Rogers' "Morning in the Mountains," Gustave Baumann's "Rio Tesuque," Norma Bassett Hall's "Sagebrush," and many others. A serigraph is a print-making technique involving use of a silk screen.

Other exhibiting artists include William Dickerson, James D. Havens, Eugenia Glaman, Leo Meissner, Louis Novak, R. Bebb, Alan Crane, Kenneth Adams, James Kassel, Margaret Ann Gaug, Polly K. Hill, Eugene Kloss, Elizabeth Norton, Rio Partridge, William Rice, Luigi Rist, James Swann and Agnes Tait.

The Prairie Print Makers is a national organization of print makers and print collectors. Its membership is nationwide. Headquarters of the organization is in Chicago.

TWO STOWAWAYS WELCOMED HOME FROM HONOLULU

SAN FRANCISCO, June 15 (UP)—A Hawaiian joyride for a teen-age boy and girl came to an end yesterday when the pair returned by plane to their forgoing parents.

Obviously pleased with their offspring's adventuresome spirit, the parents of Joan Damon, a high school senior, and of Dudley Taylor, a schoolmate who accompanied her on the "stowaway" trip to Honolulu, greeted the pair warmly as they stepped from a United Airlines plane.

The two 17-year-olds boarded the cruise ship Lurline as "stowaways" just before it sailed from San Francisco for Hawaii last Friday.

Thirty minutes after the Lurline passed under the Golden Gate bridge they "gave themselves up" and Matson navigation notified the youngsters' parents, who paid their fares to Honolulu.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Nadine L. Damon, said the $315 she had to pay for her daughter's junket would be her "graduation present." She confessed that she always had an urge to stow away on an ocean liner herself.

DUKE AND HIS SISTER SKIP WEDDING OF OLD FLAMES

LONDON, June 15 (UP)—London tongues were wagging today over Britain's party-loving Duke of Kent and his sister, Princess Alexandra. They failed to show up at the wedding of a pair of their old flames.

The Duke was photographed kissing the bride, Jane Sheffield, on a Swiss skiing party last winter. The bridegroom, Jocelyn Stevens, was Princess Alexandra's most frequent escort last year. The Duke and his mother, the Duchess of Kent, stayed away from the wedding yesterday and sent their regrets instead. The Duke, criticized recently in Parliament for his partying, went instead to a Persian ball where he jittersbugged to "Rock Around the Clock."

WARTS A MYSTERY; MAYBE DEAD CATS ARE A REMEDY

CHICAGO, June 15 (AP)—

Huck Finn's remedy for removing warts with a dead cat may have had merit. The top doctors still find them a mystery.

Dr. Roy L. Kile told the convention of the American Medical Association yesterday that investigators are pretty much agreed warts are caused by a virus.

But although the evidence is strong, he said, the doctors have not been able to prove that warts can be "communicated from one person to another."

Dr. Kile, assistant professor of dermatology at the University of Cincinnati College of Medicine, told the doctors that nearly every small community has a "character" who can "be witch off" warts.

The technique of curing physical disease by suggestion, he said, is "as dramatically presented with warts as with any disease we know."

"The occurrence and regression of these lesions has furnished a very fascinating and abundant stock of folklore," he noted.

ART MUSEUM GETS SEVEN MORE WORKS OF ST. LOUIS U. DIES

4 Prints and 3 Water Colors —Matisse and Picasso Represented.

Four prints and three water colors, including works by the noted contemporary artists Henri Matisse and Pablo Picasso, have been acquired by City Art Museum, Charles Nagel, museum director, announced yesterday.

One water color and two prints, both lithographs, were gifts, Nagel said. The other two water colors and two prints were purchased.

A lithograph titled "Seated Woman," done by Matisse in 1946, was given to the museum by Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Levin, art collectors, of University City. They also donated a water color, "Three Figures," by the contemporary German artist Emil Nolde.

A lithograph by Picasso, "Head of a Woman," was given by Mr. and Mrs. Morton D. May of St. Louis, to whom the work was inscribed in 1948. May is president of May Department Stores, Inc.

The museum purchased for $115 a print, "Hercules Slaying Cacus," by the Sixteenth Century German artist Hendrick Goltzius. An etching, "The Sleigh," by Pieter Brou, Seventeenth Century Flemish artist, was bought for $65.

Also purchased were two water colors, "The Finding of Moses," by the Eighteenth Century Italian artist, Giovanni Domenico Tiepolo, and "Emperor and Empress on Horseback," by Diebolt Lauber, German artist of the Fifteenth Century. Prices of the Tiepolo work was $195 and that of the Lauber water color $450.

The new acquisitions are on display in the new accessions gallery.

The Matisse print is the sixth by the artist in the museum's collection. The new Picasso print brings his works in the museum to 30.

Bou's etching is the first by the artist to be acquired by the museum.

APARICIO NO GHOST.

CHICAGO, June 15.—DOWN south, this spring, the chief concern in the White Sox camp was how Luis Aparicio would do. Today, as the Sox come home for a stand at Comiskey Park, the recurring worry is how everybody else will do... except Aparicio.

Instead of being asked to sub, occasionally, for a shortstop who might be having a bad time, the kid was tossed in there pretty cold. The way you used to learn to swim by being thrown in the neighborhood quarry, Chico Carrasquel was simply traded away to a pennant contender and his glove handed to Luis.

Dave Philley, for instance, had to be brought in to solve a first-base problem as well as for periodic outfield duty. George Kell was traded away to provide pitching replacement... and third-base instructor to Fred Hatfield and Sam Esposito. Larry Doby, who was expected to take over clean-up duties for the Sox, has failed to measure up so far.

So Aparicio, feared to be the weakest link in the Sox chain of performers, has actually turned out to be one of the strongest... which is a mighty fortuitous circumstance.

The Sox are so thinly strung together that they can't stand many slip-ups. Right now Jack Harshman and Dick Donovan are being found unexpectedly vulnerable.

Not Good, but Close.

Doby's first home run of the year came in the forty-fifth game and puts him 59 behind Babe Ruth's record. The Sox are not running bases. Yet, with all these temporary defections, they are only five games out of first place.

Why? Well, they've managed to beat the Indians six times in seven starts while the Indians won five out of eight from the Yanks. This sort of a round-robin equation has helped keep the three teams together, lending increased credence to the pre-season thinking that one of them will win the flag.

Come to think of it, many of the clubs in both major leagues can be thankful, to some degree, for guys on whom they didn't count too much prior to last April. Frank Torre has done a fine job for the Braves in the role of a first-baseman. Pete Daley and Don Buddin have walked into pretty steady Red Sox roles as catcher and shortstop respectively.

Walt Moryn and Pete Whisenant have given the Cubs a decided shot in both arms. Frank Robinson is making a name for himself in Cincinnati.

Tim Thompson has moved from the cat-in-the-hat assignment for Kansas City and "Tito" Francona, unheard of until spring training, is on daily call for the Baltimore outfield. "He's going to be one of the best," said Paul Richards, the Orioles manager.

But Aparicio is doing the more difficult job because he, above all these other newcomers, was asked to fill in on a bona fide title contender. How far the Sox can go is, naturally, problematical. They have to depend on pitching, because there isn't enough streamlined power to carry them over too many humps.

He Was a Lane Man.

Doby and Minnie Minoos could provide the fireworks, but it has been the experience of other Sox teams that they never could muster a one-two punch of sufficient authority... and they don't have the stand-ins.

If the pitching could steady itself and Doby get into one of his sizzling streaks, the Sox down-the-middle strength... Sherman Lollar... Nellie Fox and Aparicio around the bag could provide the impetus to keep them in contention.

As the Sox come home, the Cubs go away from a most successful home stand. "Brilliant but erratic," said "Birdie" Tobolski of the Red Sox about the Cub pitching staff... And it has been that way. There's no good reason why the Cubs shouldn't finish ahead of the Giants and Phils.

There won't be a half-dozen guys left on the Sox team for 1957, whether they win or not. That's why it's important that Aparicio is stepping into big shoes and getting the guys out. He'll have to get the players around whom the next Sox team will be rebuilt... and the Sox can thank Frank Lane for him as well as most of the current lineup!

Hamia and Berrios

Battle on KSD-TV

NEW YORK, June 15 (AP)—The "little men" take over Madison Square Garden tonight with a featherweight battle between Cherif Hamia, the handsome Algerian import, and Miguel Berrios, the midget mite from Puerto Rico. (The bout will be televised by KSD-TV).

As Hamia is ranked No. 3 among Sandy Saddler's contenders in the 126-pound division and Berrios is a recent pre-lim grad making his first Garden start as a main event, the Algerian probably will enter the ring a slight favorite.

Algonquin Swimmers Win.

Algonquin swimmers defeated Greenbriar, 156 to 120, in competition at the losers' pool Thursday night. Pat Hatch competing in the 13-14-year-old girls' division, and Mike Ross, in the 13-14-year-old boys' division, each won three events for Algonquin. Pepper Decker of Greenbriar won three events in the girls' 11-to-12 division.

Hogan, After Fifth U.S. Open Title, Leads Halfway With 140

Rhubarbs Abound In Meet

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 15 (UP)—Ben Hogan, shooting for an unprecedented fifth U. S. golf title, carded a two under par 33-38 today for an aggregate of 140 which gave him the second round lead with about half the field in.

Like Ben registered his score over the Oak Hill Country Club course he earlier described as "easy."

Hogan's score was one stroke better than three fellow pros turned in—Cary Middlecoff, Jerry Barber and Wesley Ellis, all of whom were tied at 141.

Middlecoff ruined a chance to take the lead when he triple-bogeyed the par four 463-yard seventh.

Hogan slipped. It looked as if Hogan was going to take the course apart as he went to the sixteenth hole four under par. But then he bogeyed the sixteenth and eighteenth, but that still gave him a 68—the same score which Bob Rosburg of San Francisco turned in yesterday for the first round lead.

Hogan bogeyed the third hole when he three-putted from 50 feet but birdied the next two holes. On the long 371-yard par five fourth hole he almost holed out with his wedge third, landing 10 inches from the cup. On the 440-yard par four fifth he put his second shot 15 feet from the pin and sank the putt.

He had par for the next three holes and then got his third birdie of the front nine when he sank a 35-foot putt.

On the back nine Bantam Ben started out with a birdie on the tenth when he put his eighth iron second 10 feet from the pin on the par four hole and sank the putt. He parred the next four but got his fifth birdie of the round on the tenth 133-yard fifteenth where he carded a 45-foot putt.

On the sixteenth, Hogan drove into the rough and his second was short of the green. He put his third on but two putted for a bogey. Then after paring in the rough on the eighteenth, was short with his second, and put his third on the back edge of the green, 40 feet from the pin, taking two to get down.

Cary Middlecoff, one of the favorites, blew a chance to take a commanding lead when he wound up with an even par 70, which tied him with Barber and Ellis.

Barber, Los Angeles pro, had a second-round 69, while Ellis, a pro from Riverdale, N.J., shot a 70 today to total 141.

Arnold Palmer of Latrobe, Pa., scored even par 70 for a total of 142.

Ellis is a 24-year-old Texan playing in his first open. A pro only two years, he played six tournaments on the winter circuit and finished in the money in three of them.

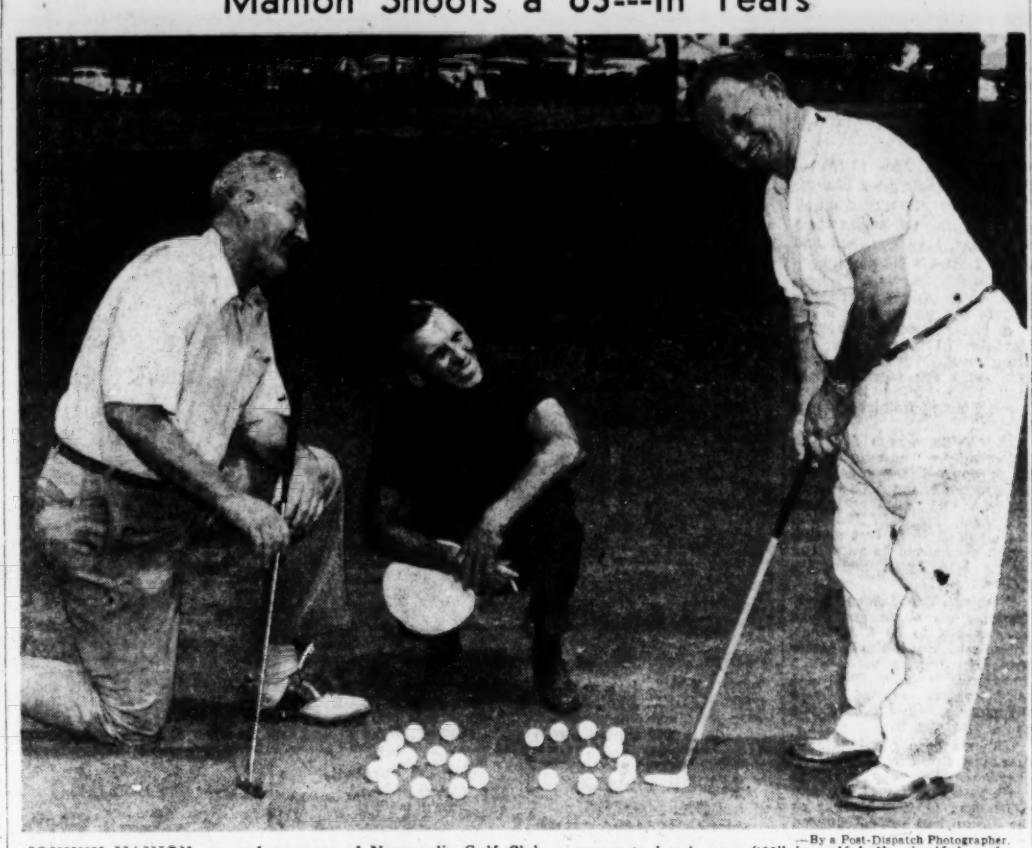

As they reported for the second round today Middlecoff and Jimmy Demaret refused to pose with Henry Cotton for a group picture. Cotton ignored both his playing partners when he reported to the tee, and neither Middlecoff nor Demaret spoke to him.

Cotton, the former British Open champion, gave himself the wrong score on one of the holes in yesterday's first round. But the U.S.G.A. officials upheld Cotton.

Reports Scoring Error.

Gil Cavani of Cedarhurst, N. Y., discovered when he reported for his second round that he turned in the wrong score for his first round. He reported an 81 while he actually shot an 82.

Yesterday Jackie Burke was penalized two strokes when he turned in the wrong card. Cavani also was penalized two strokes and his score was raised from 81 to 84.

JOHNNY MANION, general manager of Normandie Golf Club, prepares to break up a "63" in golf balls signifying the celebration of his sixty-third birthday. The occasion was marked by a "golf day" party at the course. At left is DR. PIERCE J. REILLY, also 63, and in the center DICK HOBBS. Manion has been a leading golfer and teacher here for the past 45 years.

Mexican Contrares Upsets Star Tom Brown at Triple A

By Harold Flachsbart
Francisco (Pancho) Contrares of Mexico City, the No. 2 man on the Southern California tennis team who will celebrate his twenty-second birthday tomorrow, scored the upset of the week in the Triple A Open tennis championships this afternoon.

Contrares eliminated top-seeded Tom Brown of San Francisco a former United States Davis Cup player, 9-7, 6-4, in a sizzling third-round match that lasted two hours and 15 minutes under a broiling sun.

It was a triumph of youth over a fading, good-natured veteran, who, at 33, is paying more attention to his law office than to tennis. Contrares was not sensational, but he was steady and made few errors. One of his Trojan team-mates summed it up:

"Pancho made only two errors in about every three games; Brown made more errors." The Mexico City blaster showed a tremendous serve and rallied from a 1-4 deficit in the second set with well-placed shots, forehand and backhand from the baseline and several cross-court volleys that had Brown talking to himself.

Brown, who had seemed a cinch to reach Sunday's final round after winning two Thursday matches easily, lost his own service at key moments. His cautious movements to the net didn't seem to bother Contrares, who whipped steaming sideline shots past the tenth-ranking player in the United States.

Lucille Davidson, five-time Missouri Valley champion from Kansas City, became the first player in the tournament to reach the final round when she defeated Marilyn Mueller of Clayton, 6-4, 6-3, in women's open singles.

Mrs. Davidson, immediately departed on a hurried trip to Kansas City to attend the wedding of a former school-teaching friend and to take her seven-month-old son home. The baby has been sleeping in a playpen under shade trees near countryside through all of Mrs. Davidson's victories.

The hard-hitting Valley champion will be back in St. Louis.

5-Goal Average Made by Kutis In Cup Games

By Dent McSkimming
Unless the Philadelphia Ukrainians have a much stronger defense than St. Louis soccer fans have seen this season, Kutis forwards should be good for a minimum of three goals in their national amateur final here Sunday afternoon.

Playing seven games in this national tourney, all of which resulted in victories for the St. Louis team, Kutis has scored an average of five goals per game. Opposing teams have scored only three goals.

The Philadelphia team, champion of the East in the amateur field, has a scoring record of 13-8 in its last four tournament games in which it fared as follows: Ukrainians 3, Baltimore Pompeii 3; Ukrainians 4, Ponta Delgada (Fall River, Mass.) 1; Ukrainians 3, Harnmarville (Pa.) 3; Ukrainians 2, Harnmarville 1. The caliber of play in Fall River, Baltimore and West Pennsylvania is known to be good, so there is no inclination here to underestimate the scoring ability of the Philadelphiaans.

12 Goals for Looby.
Kutis has an extra asset in the spread of its scoring power. Although Bill Looby is the driving force, with 12 goals in the seven games, he has had important assistance from Ruben Mendoza (7), Elwood Cook (5), Freddie Vasquez (4) and others. The balance of the 35 goals were made up by Jim Murphy 2, Oscar Corona and Clem Nievoehner one each, Harry Kough two penalty kicks, and one goal was credited to Kutis when a Dallas player put the ball into his own net.

So, even if Kutis is below its par five, it should still be good for three by reason of its own power and the vulnerability of the visitors.

But the St. Louis team, using its all-amateur lineup, is not impregnable. The Philadelphia team that scored a total of five goals in the two games against Harnmarville in the eastern final series should be capable of tomorrow afternoon for women's doubles competition and for the singles final Sunday against an opponent not yet determined.

Bev Tolan, a Florida University student from Maplewood, defeated Carole Boshard, another local girl, in an extra-set thriller, 2-6, 6-2, 6-2, to reach the semifinals, where she will meet the defending champion, Mrs. Marcelina Parker.

The United States senior clay courts men's singles division also moved to the semifinals with a couple of Southerners, Betsy Grant of Atlanta and Jack Station of St. Petersburg, Fla., leading the advance. Grant won from John Woodall of Los Angeles, 6-0, 6-2. Station eliminated Bernard Clinton of Dallas, Tex., 6-2, 6-1.

Al Holtman, an Illinois University sophomore, was the only St. Louisian remaining in the quarterfinals of the men's open division.

Holtman sprang the biggest upset of the four-day-old tournament yesterday when he eliminated the national intercollegiate champion, Jose Aguerre of Tulane University and Rio de Janeiro, 7-5, 2-6, 6-4.

Three St. Louis losers in the round of 16 were Earl (Butch) Buchholz, who became a bit angry with himself in losing to Armando Vieira, Brazilian Davis Cupper, 6-1, 6-2; Neil Drury, no match for Grant Golden of Chicago, and Rod Suman, who couldn't cope with the sharp all-around game of Betsy Grant.

U.S. Senior Singles.
THIRD ROUND
David Freed, St. Louis, defeated Alex Gimenez, Lima, Peru, 6-3, 6-2.
Alex Wellford, Memphis, Tenn., defeated Bill Butler, St. Louis, 6-4, 6-2.

SECOND ROUND
Richard and Richard Williams, Chicago, defeated Marion and Marion Williams, Chicago, 6-2, 6-4.
Curtis, Atlanta, Ga., 6-2, 6-4.

Narcissa Foster, St. Louis, 6-2, 6-1.

U.S. Father-Son Doubles.
SECOND ROUND
Richard and Richard Williams, Chicago, defeated Marion and Marion Williams, Chicago, 6-2, 6-4.
Curtis, Atlanta, Ga., 6-2, 6-4.
Lola Weinstein, St. Louis, 6-2, 6-3.
Narcissa Foster, St. Louis, 6-2, 6-1.

Kessler Thinks Moore Will Beat Patterson for Title

PORTLAND, Ore., June 15 (AP)—Veteran referee Harry Kessler of St. Louis believes Archie Moore will defeat young Floyd Patterson if the two meet for the heavyweight championship.

Kessler expressed that view in a visit here as a consulting engineer for a steel company. He referees fights as a hobby.

"The only thing that could beat Archie would be age," Kessler said.

"He has the skill and punch and his ring experience is far greater than that of Patterson," Kessler said.

"Floyd, while a great prospect, has been developed slowly and carefully, and in my book, needs lots more work before he would be ready for a rival as crafty and lethal as Moore."

Kessler, who refereed the fight in New York's Madison Square Garden last Friday between Tommy (Hurricane) Jackson and Patterson, defended his vote for Jackson as the winner. He was outvoted by the two judges and Patterson won the fight.

The referee said Jackson did most of the fighting for two of the three minutes in each round and hit more solid punches.

"Sure I got razed," he said, "but the next day I received at least a hundred telegrams and letters from television fans who endorsed my judgment."

Indians Close Up Gap Only Slightly

NEW YORK, June 15 (AP)—Cleveland's Indians are like the horse player who stayed up all night figuring the angles for a sure thing, then overslept and couldn't get his bet down.

When the New York Yankees built their American League lead to 6½ games with a hot 13-4 streak late last month, Manager Al Lopez and the Tribe shrugged it off. "It can't last," said the Indians. "They can't keep hitting like that. Their pitching isn't really that good."

The Tribe was right. The Yankees have won only five of 12 in June—the worst record of any club in the A.L., including last-place Washington. Cleveland, however, has won but eight of 15 in that stretch and has managed to trim New York's lead by a mere 1½ games.

Pitching—Bob Lemon. Early Wynn, Herb Score and Mike Garcia—was to be Cleveland's trump card. But in the 15 games played in June, Lemon, Wynn and Garcia have combined 3-5 mark. Score, sidelined by a tummyache, worked only one game, and won it.

Lemon's been the big loser, dropping three of four June decisions. He was whacked again yesterday for 11 hits and eight runs in four innings as the Boston Red Sox out-slugged the Tribe, 10-9.

The Yankees, meanwhile, were taking the rubber match in a series with the second place White Sox, 5-1, with Bob Grim tossing a four-hitter and Mickey Mantle hitting his twenty-second home run—his first in nine days.

No other games were scheduled in the American League as the Yankees, who open a road trip at Cleveland tonight, put their lead at five games with the Indians only five percentage points back of the White Sox.

Only one National League game was scheduled and the Milwaukee Braves closed their 15-game home stand with a 5-10 mark by beating the New York Giants, 5-2.

Jackie Jensen, who drove in four runs for the Red Sox, clipped Lemon for a three-run homer in the third. In his last four games, Lemon has been tagged for 40 hits and 21 runs. In his first eight games, the big right-hander, now 7-4, allowed only 54 hits and 17 runs.

Dick Gernert—replacing Ted Williams, who had a cold—drove home three runs on three singles and batted the winning run home in the fifth off reliever Bud Daley. Lemon hit a solo homer and Al Rosen batted in three runs as the Indians got 13 hits off winner El Delock and relievers Tom Hurd and Leo Kiley.

New York made it seven of eight against the White Sox, handing Jim Wilson an 8-3 record with three unearned runs in the third after Minnie Minoso muffed Gil McDougald's two-out fly to left. Grim struck out nine and walked only one, although giving up Dave Philley's second homer, for a 4-0 record.

Philley was tossed out for arguing a called strike in the sixth, touching off a barrage of bats, balls and towels from the Chicago dugout.

The fourth-place Braves were scoreless for four innings against Ruben Gomez, then tied it on Del Crandall's two-run homer in the fifth. Southpaw Warren Spahn, who had lost five straight, won his third with a seven-hitter and scored the deciding run on Billy Bruton's double in the sixth. Willie Mays had a home run, two singles and a walk for the Giants.

Parochial Winners.

St. Jerome defeated St. Luke, 5-1, and Holy Rosary defeated St. Kevin, 12-4, in C.Y.C. Parochial baseball playoff games yesterday in Forest Park. Games today, all scheduled to begin at 3:45 o'clock, match St. Paul and Nativity, at Penrose Park; Christ the King vs. St. Barbara, at Forest Park No. 5; and St. Francis de Sales and Mary Queen of Peace at Forest Park diamond No. 6.

Two-Stroke Penalty Riles Ford

DOUG FORD, left, explains his viewpoint to fellow golf professionals JACK FLECK and TED KROLL, right, in the clubhouse at Oak Hill Country Club, Rochester, after he had been penalized two strokes for playing a new ball before he found the ball he had been playing in the United States Open tourney. Ford made quite an issue of the penalty.

11 Enter Fairmount Handicap

Job Jessop Will Ride In Event

By Herman Wecke

Two horses which have been under colors at Fairmount Park this season are in the field of 11 entered in the $15,000 added Fairmount Handicap, which will be run as the seventh race on tomorrow night's eight-race program. The race will be at one mile and one-sixteenth.

They are Bumper Crop, winner of the $5000 Memorial day handicap, and Mrs. Elizabeth Muckler's Lord Henry, second in the May 30 race.

Clarence Meaux, who last night rode three winners to the Jake Colclasure for the jockey lead at the Collinsville track, will be up on Bumper Crop. John L. Rotz will be up on Lord Henry. Meaux victories last night came with Carol Storme ($15.00), Donald Sea ($17.80) and Kenwood ($22.80). He now has 40 wins, the same as Colclasure, who has failed to win a race this week.

Job Dean Jessop, a riding star at Fairmount when the races were held in the afternoon, and who last fall won the St. Louis Derby at Cahokia, will try for another local victory with M. H. Van Berg's King Shannon. Strynner, second in the St. Louis Derby, will represent Mrs. A. M. Creech and will be ridden by John Heckmann, who rode the four-year-old in the Cahokia classic.

H. G. Brockman's Happy Go Lucky, which has won $19,700 this year, arrived from Chicago yesterday.

Other newcomers to St. Louis district race followers expected to go to the post are French Bleu, Rivergate, Smokelore, a winner at Baltimore last Saturday at a $68 for $2 payoff, and Old Forge.

Trainer C. C. Lemons saddled his twentieth and twenty-first winners last night when Pictureman and Akin won for Mikel Farm. . . Pictureman and Akin have the same sire, Hachazo. . . Both horses were ridden by Mitchell Huser, who now has 18 first in his credit.

A crowd of 4813 bet $193, 10 on the night's program. . . The double on Hoosier Havoc and Gin Tonic paid $41.80 for $2.

Handicap eligibles are scheduled to parade between races on tonight's card.

NO PARKING PROBLEMS

Lot Operators Enjoy Use of Meter Spaces on Street

Making the most of street parking facilities, attendant from jammed parking lot in 1100 block of Locust street puts coins in meter after rolling customer's automobile from the crowded lot.

Lot is still filled but attendants have spotted a potential open spot on the street and are still in business. As customer (carrying coat) moves away from double-parked automobile, one attendant moves to the driver's seat while another heads to machine about to be moved from curb at left.

New, and profitable, business is maneuvered into spot left vacant beside meter with 30 minutes still paid up. Charge on lot is 50 cents an hour; meter parking is 5 cents an hour. Practice, of which many customers are unaware, is reported to be prevalent throughout downtown area.

RUSHING INTO SUMMER

A day awaited since last September is filled with youthful exultation and summer becomes a reality as youngsters bound into vacation from Mullanphy School, 4221 Shaw boulevard, today. With most county and parochial schools already dismissed for the summer, pupils at city schools were casting few backward glances as they hustled into the pleasant task of catching up on vacation pursuits—and little, if any, interest was being expressed in the distant date when classes resume next Sept. 6.

'Holiday' Misses Boat As a Pleasure Cruise

By John Crosby

SOME of us keep fighting for ambitious television such as the spectaculars. On the other side are the commercial folk who would like to make a living out of those filmed half-hour comic strips like "December Bride."

JOHN CROSBY

Given their own way the package producers and—let's face it—the networks would like to load themselves with half-hour packages. Just put the show on the air and let it run forever. It's a comfortable way to run a business, but from the point of view of the victim at home, I don't think it's the best way and I have said so repeatedly.

Then, there comes along something like Max Liebman's "Holiday," a spectacular which NBC-TV offered recently, and it pulls the rug out from under us. "Holiday," on which a bundle of money must have been spent, was about as bad as a television show could get. It had color. It had an expensive—though not a good—cast. It had music based on Johann Strauss. The plot was fantastically romantic. The backgrounds included Paris, Vienna and Venice—and where can you get better backgrounds than that?

And still, it was all pretty dreadful. It's easy to conclude from "Holiday" that this sort of venture simply isn't any good and television ought to take refuge in something safe like "What's My Line."

THIS IS AN EASY WAY OUT but it's not, by any means, a sensible one. "Holiday" was bad because an enormous amount of sheer lunacy went into its production. In the first place, it was based on a play called "The Grand Tour" by Elmer Rice which ran a grand tour of eight days on Broadway. Not that everything that runs eight days is a turkey but... well—come to think of it—everything that runs eight days is a turkey. So much for the original play.

THE PLOT is about a school teacher, who goes to Europe and falls in love with a handsome but cryptic individual. After hitting all the spots—from Paris to Venice—with him, she discovers he's an embezzler. So she pays his debts, restores him to his wife and goes back to teaching school.

Put badly like that, it sounds improbable. But when you put it in color—with Doretta Morrow, Keith Andes and Kitty Carlisle—it's impossible.

Well, I can remember when my mother used to come back from a bad evening at the theater, fix a cold eye on me, and say: "If you couldn't write a better play than that..." In other words, it was my fault. She didn't exactly blame me for writing the play she's seen; but she blamed me for not having written something better, that should have been in the theater that night.

IT IS THIS KIND OF THINKING that I devoutly hope will not overwhelm the sponsors and the networks and especially the public. When you see a bad show on television, you shouldn't kick the set; that isn't where the fault lies. Where does it lie? Well, it seems to me that Max Liebman, who has had virtually unlimited funds to play with this year (this was his last production of the season), and the use of NBC's best color studios on both coasts, and the run of the house, ought to answer that question himself.

Preventing Quarrels

By Dr. Paul Popenoe

MOST people go into marriage expecting that their new relationship will demand some adjustments. Occasionally they seem to be surprised.

"I don't know what is the matter with us," Mrs. S. writes, "But we have been married seven months already, and I can't see any adjustments that I have been called upon to make so far."

Mrs. S. is a fortunate and an unusual woman. It is a fact, however, that some people find adjustments merely because they are looking for them. Go into marriage with the confidence that it will be happy because you are going to find that the difficulties are rare.

BUT you will have to expect a few after the honeymoon is over. According to one definition, the honeymoon is over when each partner stops saying to the other, "Darling, you are absolutely perfect," and begins to say instead, "The trouble with you is..." When that day comes, get ready to prevent quarrels.

Avoid over-fatigue. Look for the three danger spots in each 24 hours. These are (a) early morning, (b) late afternoon when husband comes home, and (c) after you go to bed at night. Many quarrels start before breakfast when both are hungry and hurried. But the largest number, according to some surveys, begin in the late afternoon when the husband comes home tired, hungry and perhaps worried and cross from the day's work, to be met by an equally tired and irritated wife. Some of the longest and most unpleasant quarrels, however, start at bedtime. At almost any cost, keep the conversation on pleasant-matters then.

AVOID CONFLICT by a division of labor. If each knows what he is expected to do and the other keeps out of that area much of the bickering and nagging will be eliminated.

Finally, when a quarrel does start, stop right in your tracks and say to yourself "Hold on, what is the shooting really about?"

Keep the discussion confined to facts. Focus down on the actual point at issue. Most of us immediately go off into personalities instead. That is when the trouble really starts. Don't let it start.

Human Values for Home Economics

Speaker at St. Louis U. Conference Emphasizes New Goals

By Mary Kimbrough

A YOUTHFUL New Englander, whose career in home economics has progressed from a junior high school cooking class to the deanship of the largest college home economics department in the world, has watched her profession, in those intervening years, change its emphasis from plain and fancy buttonholes to happier family life. And that, in turn, she is convinced, means better communities and ultimately a better world.

Here to address the St. Louis University Home Economics Education Conference, to continue on the campus through Tuesday, Dr. Helen LeBaron, dean of the division of home economics at Iowa State College, sees human, as well as culinary and fancywork values in the area of home economics. As she sees it, her profession now must be dedicated to the goal of better family relationships and growth of the individual in relation to the home and to his community, rather than to the domestic skills of yesterday.

"As important as they are, those skills mean little without the fundamental human values which are so necessary in our society," she said. "Yesterday, we didn't worry so much about those values. We thought they were there and didn't need to be developed. But we have learned that they just don't grow by themselves. They must be nurtured."

Addressing the 70-member conference from 16 states and Canada, the majority of whom are teaching members of Catholic religious orders, Dr. LeBaron pointed out that "the values an individual holds are of paramount importance because they are the most powerful force behind all his actions."

"We have known for many years that biological needs and drives influence human behavior. Psychologists used to think they constituted the determining factor. Now we have research which shows that significant as those forces may be, the values an individual holds are much more powerful in directing his course and his acts."

"Obviously, the values held

DR. HELEN LeBARON... "YESTERDAY, WE DIDN'T WORRY SO MUCH ABOUT THOSE VALUES."

by the family are of primary importance in shaping the values of the individual. It is apparent too that the quality of family living depends more upon the values a family holds than upon the homemaking knowledge and skills its various members possess, important as these may be in contributing to the health and comfort of its members."

Dr. LeBaron's own interest in the realm of home economics and its emphasis on family living goes back into her own childhood spent in a happy Vermont home, and to her junior high school days when a highly-respected home economics teacher encouraged her to enter a similar career. First concerned principally with dietetics and nutrition, she then turned toward teaching emphasizes the profession's broadening aspects and the importance of the masculine as well as feminine influence in creating a healthy and happy home atmosphere conducive to the personal growth and development of its individual members.

"If we are serious in stating the goals of homemaking education in our schools to be those of helping young people learn how to be better family members and the improving of family living, then we must, as homemaking teachers, be as concerned with improving family values as in developing homemaking skills."

"Before we are ready to plan for ways of teaching in relation to family values, we need some insight as to how a family acquires its values. There is much about this process that we don't know."

"Our task as homemaking teachers, I believe, is complicated by the fact that every family is different. Each has its own set of values, its unique cluster of guiding principles which it holds in high esteem. "Values that a family hold are revealed by the things its members say and do. John, a boy from the Kentucky mountains, was given the Stanford-Binet Intelligence Scale. At the 9-year level the scale includes this subtest: 'If you were to buy 4 cents worth of candy and give the storekeeper 10 cents, how much money would you get back?' The boy answered, 'I never had 10 cents and if I had I wouldn't spend it for candy and anyway candy is what your mother makes.'"

"The examiner decided to vary the question, since the original didn't seem to be adapted to the child's background. He asked, 'If you had taken 10 cows to pasture and six strayed away, how many would you have left to drive home?' This time the reply was, 'We don't have 10 cows, but if we did I lost six, I wouldn't dare go home!'"

Words, Wit And Wisdom

By William Morris

Conversation Clinic.

QUESTION: When I went to school—a good many years ago, it's true—I was taught that there was no such word as "enthuse." One "became enthusiastic about" but one did not "enthuse over" anything. Yet nowadays I seem to hear it often, even from the lips of people who ought to know better. What do you think of the word?

ANSWER: Speaking for myself, I don't like it either. But, as a student of language, aware that our mother tongue is constantly growing and changing, I cannot blind myself to the fact that "enthuse" is now commonly heard in the speech of literate people—those who, my correspondent thinks, "ought to know better."

"Enthuse," then, is today acceptable on the popular, conversational level of speech. It is still taboo in formal speech and writing and should also be avoided in business correspondence.

QUESTION: How about the expression: "I can't seem to do the job." Is this correct?

ANSWER: No. This formulation is not acceptable. Say rather: "I can't do the job" or "I seem unable to do the job."

QUESTION: What do you think of the word "peeve"? I was greatly surprised recently to hear our minister use it in the course of a sermon. It sounds very slangy to me.

ANSWER: "Peeve" is what the word-sleuths call a "back formation" from the adjective "peevish," just as "enthuse" is a back formation from "enthusiastic." While the verb "peeve" cannot properly be labeled "slang," it surely is too recent a coinage to be admissible in anything so formal as a sermon. Let's label it colloquial, meaning that it may be used in informal conversation and writing. By the way, the popular expression "pet peeve" would pretty definitely still merit the label "slang."

Secrets of Charm The Double Chin

WEAR THE MORE-HAT PROUDLY... AND WITH A SINGLE CHIN.

BY and large the flattery of the airy, bulky bigger hat is unmistakable. Nothing could be more romantic than a big flower-laden one. Its news is unchallenged... its fashion alluring if worn proudly. That means keeping the chin up. Let it droop forward, then it's old hat—or not noticed at all.

Big hats come and go as styles change. Some women collect a wardrobe of hats, so they'll always have the right hat for a certain occasion. But no one wants a collection of extra chins—or even the suggestion that a double chin is on the way.

HERE are some exercises for banishing a double chin: Drop head forward on chest. Then, leading with your chin, turn your head slowly to one shoulder, rolling head up and around until chin touches the other shoulder. Now, back to front again. Try to make a complete slow circle with your chin leading at all times. Circle left to right four times—right to left four times.

The New Films

By Myles Standish

Italian Gem

THE Italian film, in late years, with one or two exceptions like "Umberto D," subordinated to sex and box-office, makes a stunning comeback as an art in "MADDALENA," opening tonight at the SHADY OAK THEATER.

It is a tale, simple in framework but profound in its implications, of how the rich man of mountain village, lured by the local priest's dominance, plans to humiliate him and have him forced from the parish. This cunning fellow goes to a bordello in a city and hires a prostitute with an angelic face to play the role of the Madonna in the village's Good Friday religious procession, supplying her with a forged letter identifying her as coming from a convent home.

The stranger is accepted by the priest because the local women, split in jealous factions, are unable to agree on a candidate for the honor. As the deception mounts, even the plotter becomes frightened and tries to call it off. But the prostitute, nursing her own private bitterness and sorrow, insists on going through with it; her little daughter was burned to death—a harrowing, shocking incident—while presenting a letter to the Virgin Mary in a convent school first communion ceremony when her flimsy dress caught fire.

When a mother praying for her dying son sees the imposter appear by the church altar in her ceremonial garb as the Madonna, the hysterical woman thinks she has seen a miraculous appearance; she is convinced her son will be saved by a miracle, and he does live. Appalled by this top to her sacrilege, the wretched prostitute confesses to the priest, and is absolved. But the arrogant patron, furious and drunk because the prostitute won't become his mistress, denounces her, and the outraged villagers stone her to death as she clutches a religious image.

This stark and devastating drama, with obvious roots in Mary Magdalen and Mary of Egypt, has been so finely done by Director Augusto Genina from a screen play by himself and three others, that it mounts scene by powerful scene into an overwhelming emotional experience. The realism is superb. The interplay of cynicism, selfishness, bigotry and cruelty with tenderness, mercy and suffering builds some wrenchingly poignant scenes so it becomes one of the most moving film works in years. It wrings the tears of pity and the shock of terror to make it a tragedy in the classic mold.

Perhaps this couldn't have been done without a marvelously true and emotionally tearing performance by Marta Toren, the Swedish actress, which plumbs the depths of the anguish and degradation of the fallen woman. It is exquisitely sensitive work. Gino Cervi as the kindly priest is quietly effective. Charles Vanel as the overbearing big-shot, gives another of his sound performances. Genina has handled his shrill leathery village harpies with shrewd effect, and photographer Claude Renoir has shot the picture in a handsome, restrained Technicolor. There are English subtitles.

This is a case of a theme which might have evolved into a banal and hammy tearjerker in lesser hands being handled with such taste and deep perception so that it is a work of shining beauty.

Well, There You Are, George

Obviously, in his moving picture debut, George Gobel couldn't stick to the wispy, whimsical, paradoxical type of monologue which brought him to fame on TV. So Sidney Sheldon and old-hand Preston Sturges whipped him up a sleek comedy screenplay for his debut.

"THE BIRDS AND THE BEES," now at the FOX, which, using a formula I dimly remember having been done before, has him as a bashful heir to a wieners fortune who is trapped aboard an ocean liner by a team of card-sharps, Mizzi Gaynor and David Niven as her father. George has to go in for a lot of slapstick—he proves himself a neat man for diving headfirst into a tub of food—but manages to get in enough of the typical Gobel delivery, like that of a drawing, poker-faced plexie, to make it pretty amusing. The plot holds up well for the sort of nonsense it is. Miss Gaynor displays an enchanting vitality and bright allure that makes it no wonder she holds poor little George in a suspended dither, as she did me, too. There are a couple of musical interludes which don't matter. Fred Clark, Reginald Gardiner, Hans Conreid and Harry Bellaver lend adept hands to the proceedings. It is in VistaVision.

Too Arty to Be Art
"THE NAKED DAWN," (the title doesn't mean a thing, as you might suspect), which opens tonight at the PAGEANT, was obviously intended to be an artistic effort on the theme of the corrosive effects of greed on the human character. A lusty Mexican bandito, escaping from a freight car robbery in which his pal was killed, holes up with a simple young peon and his wife. The peon has been content to work his little holding, but the bandit gets him drunk, takes him to town, introduces him to crime in a robbery of a greedy American freight agent who has been the bandit's "fence," and to night-life in the form of a luscious dancer and a brawl in a cantina. The bandit, a generous, principled fellow, gives the peon half of his money and refuses to run away with the peon's dissatisfied wife. But the peon, his avarice aroused, tries twice to kill the robber for the rest of the money. The surprisingly forgiving bad man loses his life saving the confused farmer from capture in the climax and setting him firmly again on the road, presumably, of virtue.

Arthur Kennedy is a good actor, and his bad man is forcefully done, although any actor with a thick assumed accent never is quite convincing. Eugene Iglesias as the peon and Betta St. John as the wife also are expert enough. But the thing never rings quite true. It seems too theatrical in its simplicity, a little too self-consciously arty.

Unintriguing Intrigue
A young man named Sheldon Reynolds who has been successfully promoting a motion picture series, "FOREIGN INTRIGUE," in television for the past four years has made the mistake of taking his subject and title into a full-length color picture for theaters—it is showing at LOEW'S STATE.

Robert Mitchum, who is properly laconic, can take or deliver a punch with the best of them, and looks good in a shabby trench coat, is his hero, and Mr. Reynolds has uncovered a fascinating Swedish dish, Ingrid Tulean, with silky blonde hair, fine features, and large mysterious brown eyes. But there the virtues cease. For an action melodrama, the piece is one of the talkiest and dullest we have ever encountered.

Bob, as the press agent for a rich man who dies of a heart attack in the French Riviera, searches out his employer's mysterious past and finds out he gained his riches blackmailing four intended Quislings of Hitler's in England, the United States, Sweden and Switzerland. This information is gained after an hour and a half of dialogue with convolutions twisting it into knots. It would have made a good start for a spy thriller. Instead, here it is the ending. The film is stazy. It is tedious. It has utterly no suspense. It has very little interest or logic. In one scene, Mitchum, visiting Stockholm, talks on a porch in a night fog with Miss Tulean for five minutes to no point and no effect, until they are ready to yell: "Kiss her, and get it over with!"

Reynolds has committed the triple crime of being producer, writer and director. I recommend that as a lesson he be directed to view every picture Alfred Hitchcock ever made to find out how thrillers are put together.

Novel Approach to Young Offenders

New York Judge Has New Probationers Meet 'Graduates'—Widespread Interest in Plan

By Frederic Sondern Jr.

ONE evening last September, Chief Justice Irving Ben Cooper of New York City's Court of Special Sessions—one of the largest criminal tribunals in the country—began an experiment that no judge had ever tried before.

That night the usually teeming Criminal Courts Building was deserted—except for 27 young men and women between the ages of 17 and 19. All were first-time law-breakers recently convicted of petty forgery, shoplifting, pickpocketing and similar crimes.

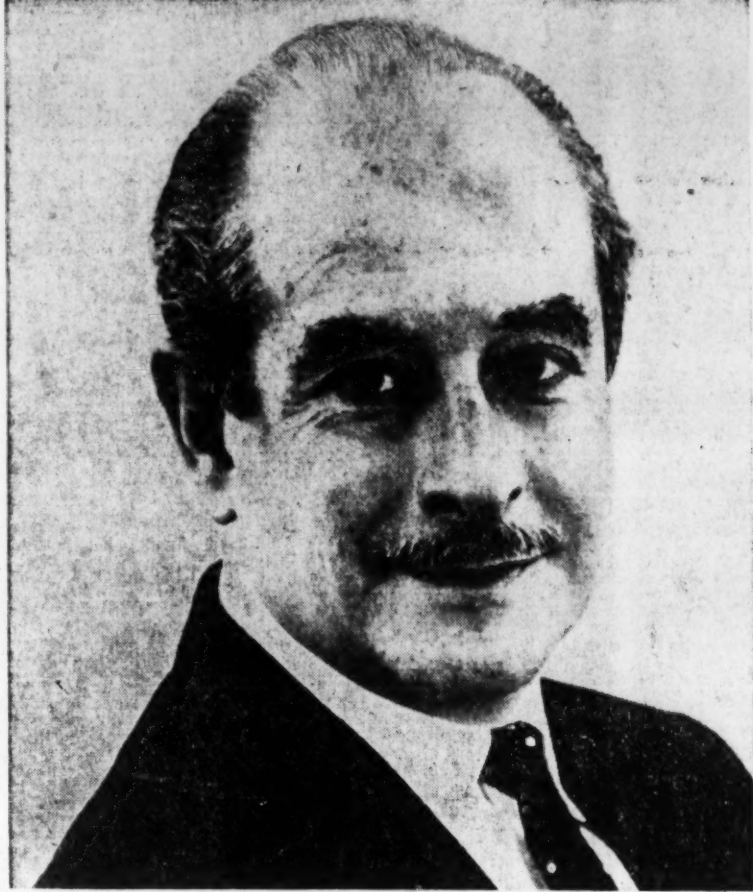

The 27 young people were nervous as they filed into the Chief Justice's comfortable, book-lined chambers. Each of them, being on probation for three years, had to report at designated times to a probation officer and give a full account of his work, his friends, his life in general. Each knew that if he failed to meet the strict requirements he might at any time be taken back to court, sentenced for his original offense and sent to prison.

The group had been summoned without explanation. Some thought they were going to be sent to jail; others expected to undergo an examination; all were prepared for an ordeal of some sort. Clear in every young face was the shock of his or her recent experiences—the soul-searing arrest, the police station, the withdrawal of ashamed family and friends, the detention, the trial.

"Please bring in the guests," said Justice Cooper to his secretary. Eight people came into the room. They were slightly older than the probationers, clean-cut, pleasant-looking well-dressed. Hostile stares from the youngsters met them. Muttered a blue-jeaned youth slouched in his chair: "Now I get more lectures from more fancy jerks."

Justice Cooper's guests were "graduates," as he calls them—ex-probationers who had gone through the mill and now, released from supervision, were started on good careers and happy lives. The Justice had chosen them carefully, to form as broad a cross-section of New York youth as the new probationers represented. There were two women and six men. Six had committed thefts, one a criminal assault, and one had been a narcotics user. When the Judge had asked them, personally and discreetly, to come and talk to the new probationers, all had agreed enthusiastically.

Judge Cooper, watching the two groups from behind his desk, was tense. For 10 years the silver-haired, 54-year-old Judge has been fighting for the intelligent treatment of first offenders, to save them from the inevitable hardened criminals. His campaign for the expansion of a well-administered probation system in his courts has been so successful that a grateful city has tripled the number of probation officers assigned to him—with spectacular results. Over 75 per cent of the young first offenders put on probation go straight; but still more could be saved, Judge Cooper thought, if the young delinquent could be made to see that the court, the probation officers and the public were not his enemies but prepared to be his friends. This evening's meeting would tell whether his new idea had any chance of success.

JUDGE IRVING BEN COOPER... A REMARKABLE EXPERIMENT.

Gravely the Judge explained who his guests were and why they had come. Twenty-seven suspicious pairs of eyes were fastened on the ex-probationers. "It's a fake," snarled one gum-chewing boy in a penetrating whisper. Evenly, Judge Cooper went on. To avoid any mention of names, each guest had been given a large card bearing a letter of the alphabet. "Will 'A' stand up?" said the Judge.

He turned to the youngsters. "I want you to understand that Miss A was at one time on probation in this court, just as all of you are now." The Judge looked around: most of the faces were still full of disbelief. He turned back to his witness. "And now, will you tell us whatever you feel like telling about your arrest, your probation and your experience since your probation ended?"

The handsome young woman hesitated for a moment, then began to speak, slowly and carefully. "The arrest made a terrible impact on me. I wondered what I would do when I came out of jail. I couldn't go back to my family or friends. It was the first time I ever gave serious thought to what I was going to be." Her voice grew stronger as she went on, reliving the tortures of the weeks from her arrest to her trial.

The room had become quiet. The 27 were listening; this was what they had been through themselves. "At first I didn't like my probation officer, on principle," the young woman went on. "I didn't feel

I wanted to trust her or anyone else in the court." Young heads were nodding in agreement. "But then I found out that there was a person who was really interested in me." The story was simply told. Probation Officer Mary Kane had persuaded the frightened, confused, rebellious girl that her life was far from ruined, that she had much to live for, and had prodded her into finishing her college education. After graduation Miss A found a good job—only to be dismissed because of her former arrest. It was a crushing blow, but Miss Kane talked her into trying again. She landed another job, kept it and is now a highly respected social worker in a municipal agency. "I couldn't have done it without the help I got," she concluded.

"Nuts," murmured the lounging boy. But Judge Cooper noticed that the expression on his face had changed.

Mr. B, on whom Judge Cooper called next, was a Puerto Rican. "My probation officer," he said, "he is like a father. Only I tell him things I don't tell my family. He gives me better advice. I begin thinking that what I was doing before was wrong."

Mr. B had been advised by Acting Chief Probation Officer Morris Agid to go back and finish school. "You followed his advice?" asked Judge Cooper. "I sure did," replied Mr. B, with a happy smile.

Mr. B had then served two years in the Army, taken a job, married and had two children. Now he was doing well.

Even before Mr. C stood up, the Chief Justice had begun to relax. He had a feeling that he was on the right track. Mr. C, who had been the most serious offender in the group, began his story: "Before I got into trouble and got on probation, I had an attitude: 'Hokey for me and nobody else.' He looked hard at the new probationers. "Now I'm going to try to pay back the people who gave me another chance. I'm going to pay back my mother and father for the sorrow I caused them. And my probation officer, for his headaches. He saw me through school; he was always there when I needed him. He made me start thinking, and building a career, planning for the future."

Judge Cooper looked around the room. Youngsters were now sitting bolt upright on the edges of their chairs. The belligerence was gone; many a face wore a thoughtful frown. They stayed that way for the next hour as the various "graduates" detailed a past gamut of troubles, went on to the present. One had become an electronics expert, with a salary of $9000 a year. Another was about to be appointed to the police department after passing a stiff examination and a rigid character investigation.

Another was a successful automobile salesman.

Toward the end, the probationers began shuffling and coughing. Something was wrong, and Judge Cooper realized immediately what it was. They wanted to talk themselves. With a deep sigh, the Judge leaned back in his chair; he knew that his experiment had succeeded—at least the first part of it. He turned to the probationers. "Now maybe some of you would like to ask questions. Or perhaps you'd like to tell what's troubling you. Just identify yourselves by the numbers on the cards I've given you."

THE floodgates opened. No. 9 wanted to tell how much his probation officer had done for him. He had suddenly realized it. No. 4 wanted everybody to know what getting a regular job had meant for him. "I feel 100 per cent better," he announced. "Now I can work myself up to a foreman, or someday a manager maybe."

Judge Cooper smiled. He himself, as a boy, had had to beg coal from railroad superintendents to heat the Cooper family's miserable living quarters. "No reason in the world why you can't," said the Chief Justice.

One boy wanted to know whether it was really possible for anyone to become a police officer if he had ever been arrested himself. "You have to convince them that you're all right," said the ex-probationer who was about to get his appointment. "But I'm doing it."

For another half hour questions and answers flew between probationers and the "graduates." It became clear that the new offenders were finding the session eye-opening. Probation records show that 26 of those young probationers are now well along on the right road. "They all had the living proof," as one experienced and practical probation officer put it, "of what others could do."

This seems to be the most effective therapy there is for stopping their potential young criminals. Judge Cooper may have invented something very important.

The Chief Justice plans to expand his experiment into a systematic program of meetings between new and ex-probationers. And his idea is spreading. His last annual report, almost all of which he devoted to explaining the experiment, is in demand by bar associations, courts and civic-improvement organizations all over the country.

Bolton J. Lawes, Chief Judge of the District of Columbia Federal Court, a spearhead of the National Probation and Parole Association and one of the country's leading jurists, writes: "This remarkable experiment points the way for other courts everywhere to a new technique for reaching young offenders and giving them confidence in their ability to come back to society."

"Look," he said, "I was playing a four-heart contract with the East hand. If the king of diamonds is right, I make 12 tricks. If the king of clubs is right, too, I take all the tricks. As it was, I made five-odd by perfect technique. What happened in the other room, Dale, when you and Muzzy held the North-South cards?"

"Mr. East played the hand at four hearts," too," said Mr. Dale, but he didn't make seven, six, five or even four. In other words, we set him a trick."

"Impossible," said Mr. Champion.

"Mr. East made no errors," Mr. Dale explained. "But against Muzzy's opening lead he didn't have a chance. Don't you see what happened?"

Mr. Champion thought awhile. Then, "I've got it," he said. "My lecture."

"Right," Mr. Dale agreed. "Your lecture to Muzzy during our practice session about leading the fourth highest card from his longest and best suit. That won the match for us. He's been in the habit of leading any old card from a long suit—third best, fifth best or what not."

"Of course, you were talking mainly about leading against no-trump contracts. But Muzzy applied it to everything. He opened the five of spades against East's four-heart contract."

You can see what this opening did. Mr. Dale won with the king of spades and returned the jack of clubs. East had no place to discard his losing clubs at this point because dummy's diamonds were not yet set up. He took the club finesse. Mr. Muzzy won with the king and, after an agonizing wait, returned a club.

This knocked out East's ace and subsequently he had to lose another club as well as a trick to the king of diamonds. Down one.

My Day Loans for Education

By Eleanor Roosevelt

HYDE PARK, N.Y.
A GOOD deal of thought evidently is being given to the problem of how we can provide higher education for all of our young citizens who want it and do not have the means.

The other day I wrote about the Cavanaugh plan. Since then I have received information on another plan, based on creating an investment fund from which grants or regular loans would be made to young people for college education. Security would be doubled by asking the participation of their parents or other elders.

There is a risk in this, of course, but by and large returns from loans of this kind have been the highest of any type in the loan business. And the loans would be spread over such a large area that the risk would be minimized.

How much of a burden repayment of these loans would be on the first years of earning is difficult to tell. But the suggestion is made that repayment be spread over a great number of years, as is the cost of housing, with the possibility of paying on the principal at given intervals, thereby reducing the annual interest payments.

This type of plan would meet the problem of education by private means rather than by public taxation. But I am not at all sure that we should rule out the possibility of increasing public education in this country until we have opened up to every citizen capable of passing the examinations and demonstrating the desire for it all possible avenues to achieve the learning he desires.

I think that since education serves the public good generally, there is a valid argument for opening it up to everyone through taxation of all the people instead of creating a burden which young people or their parents would have to bear for a number of years.

Miss Helene Bakewell To Bow at Reception

By Margaret Allen Ruhl

THE first debutante of the 1956-57 season is Miss Helene Brown Bakewell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude I. Bakewell, 5132 Westminster place. The initial party in her honor is an old-fashioned reception to be given from 5 to 7 o'clock today by her grandfather, Paul Bakewell Jr., at his home, 10 Portland place.

Guests will be limited to contemporaries of her parents and her grandfather and the six debutantes who will assist. They are Miss Emily Norcross, Miss Carol Smith, Miss Suzy Niedringhaus, Miss Catherine Corley, Miss Barbara Persons and Miss Elizabeth Swartz.

Miss Bakewell, her parents and her grandfather will receive at the living room mantle where ivy and lilies of the Nile have been arranged, but most of the party will be given in the expansive garden, which is accessible from the porch. White petunias and pink geraniums have been used extensively in the decorations. The pink blossoms provide centerpieces for numerous small tables, each of which is covered with light green organdy and shaded by a green fringed umbrella, and the long buffet table, and afford color accent in the garden itself. A second table, centered with a tiered white ceramic epergne filled with pink geraniums, is in the dining room. A string orchestra will play.

For her first party Miss Bakewell will wear a short pale blue organdy frock, embroidered in white, made with a strapless bodice and full skirt. Her flowers are to be pale lavender orchids. Mrs. Bakewell's gown is champagne-colored organza, bodice veiled in white cotton lace.

The debutante, her brother, Claude I. Bakewell Jr., her parents and her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Bakewell III, will spend the summer in Europe. Sailing July 19 on the Queen Mary, they will go to England, France and Italy and on a North Cape cruise. As the season progresses there will be other parties for Miss Bakewell, notably a ball to be given by the Paul Bakewells III, Dec. 21 at the St. Louis Country Club at which she will share honors with Miss Carol Smith, daughter of the Philip Platt Smiths.

Namesake of her mother, the former Miss Helene Brown, the debutante is a granddaughter of Mrs. Alanson C. Brown and the late Mr. Brown. Her paternal grandmother, Mrs. Mary Fullerton Bakewell, lives in Scituate, Mass. A former student at Villa Duchesne and House in the Pines, Norton, Mass., Miss Bakewell was graduated this month from the Whitfield School here.

Miss Coste Married in New York

MISS JUDITH ROSEL COSTE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Wilkins Coste, 200 East Sixty-sixth street, New York, former St. Louisans, was married yesterday afternoon in St. James Episcopal Church to Gilbert Whipple Chapman Jr. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert W. Chapman of 1 Sutton place South and Redding, Conn. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. James A. Paul, rector of Holy Trinity Episcopal Church, New York, and was followed by a reception at the Colony Club.

Mr. Coste escorted his daughter to the altar and gave her in marriage. She wore pale ivory silk taffeta made with a fitted bodice and long light sleeves and a full, trained skirt, and a veil of antique duchess and rose point lace. She carried a small cascade of white carnations and lilies of the valley.

Miss Blakeslee Cook of St. Louis was maid of honor and Mrs. John R. Coste, the bride's sister-in-law, matron of honor. They wore light green bombazine dresses and carried cascades of pale and shocking pink carnations. Similarly dressed were the bridesmaids, Miss Celia Larson and Miss Nina Piroumoff, New York; Miss Evelyn Ledyard, Providence, R.I.; Miss Sheila Kellogg, Libertyville, Ill., and Mrs. Henry W. Kalt, Valley Stream, L.I., the bridegroom's sister. Their bouquets were pink carnations and ivy.

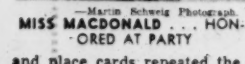

Stephen C. Owen Jr., was best man. Ushers were John P. Phair, Mark Thoman, Charles P. West, Edward S. Barlow, William T. Kilbourne, James B. Brown, John R. Coste, the bride's brother; Henry W. Kalt, the bridegroom's brother-in-law; Albert G. Scherer, Calvin D. Trowbridge, Theodore R. Robb and Charles P. Lord.

The bride attended Brearley School, New York, and was graduated from Miss Porter's School, Farmington, Conn., and Sarah Lawrence College. She made her debut in 1952, attended the Junior League ball that year and was a member of the Junior Assemblies. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. J. P. Hoeffler, St. Louis, and Emile Rodol Cramer, Mrs. Lillian W. Coste and Felix Coste, none of whom is living. Mr. Chapman is a graduate of Pomfret School and Yale University, earlier this month, where he became a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon and Book and Snake.

Debutantes Honored at Luncheons

TWO debutante luncheons were events on today's calendar. Mrs. Eldred A. Woolwine Jr. entertained a group at Old Warren Country Club in honor of Miss Mary Jane Macdonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Macdonald, 6 Lenox place. Guests, who were served in the Harlequin room, included Miss Carolyn Cone, Miss Mary Virginia Harms, Miss Betsy Holmes, Miss Sandra Humphreys, Miss Janet Ann MacCarthy, Miss Susan Priest, Miss Judith Schettler, Miss Mareth Sandrock, Miss Natalie Reeve, Miss Sarah Lund, Miss Jan Soest and Miss Susan Spoehrer. A red and white floral centerpiece featured a large bird cage with small red birds, and place cards repeated the red and white color scheme.

At the Old Barn Inn, St. Alban's, Mrs. Hugh W. Baird, Mrs. John C. Harris and Mrs. Otto S. Conrades were co-hostesses at a luncheon and swimming party in honor of Miss Susanne Woods, whose parents are Dr. and Mrs. Robert E. Woods, 48 Picardy lane, Ladue. Luncheon was served on the porch to Miss Carolyn Haffner, Miss Jean Alexander, Miss Lucy Ann Reuter, Miss Terry McIlvaney, Miss Myrtle Boehmer, Miss Marie Garesche, Miss Judy Olin, Miss Barbara Schlueter, Miss Diana Depping, Miss Joan Pranger, Miss Joan Asche, Miss Barbara von Hoffmann and Miss Nancy Vogel. The guest of honor's mother also attended the party.

Martha Carr's

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. OPINION

Today's column is devoted to teen-agers who are invited to submit their problems to Martha Carr.

Dear Martha:

I AM 15 and go steady with a boy who has just graduated from school. I am going to move about 25 miles away next month and wonder if I should continue going steady. There is a possibility that his sister will build a new home next to ours but that may be quite some time away. I had gone with a boy in the town where I am going to move, and it may be that he will want to take me out. Should I go steady with the first boy even though another would like to date me?

Puzzled.

I think you'll just have to decide whether you like the boy here well enough to turn down all other dates, even though you won't be seeing him very often. I can't see much sense in going steady with someone from another town—that is, if going steady means to you (as it does to me) that you date him exclusively. I think you'd have more fun to go with the boys in your new town, unless you're really very much interested in this one boy and think you might want to be engaged to him some day.

Dear Martha:

THERE IS A GIRL in my room who is very popular with the boys, and because of that she shows off and thinks she can boss everyone else around. Should I try to be friends with her or should I ignore her? I really don't like her very much.

M. W.

Usually, when people show off, it's because they feel insecure and want attention. You can ignore what she does, if you don't approve of it, but that doesn't mean you have to be unfriendly or discourteous to her. Maybe she would welcome your friendship. Try being nice to her before you cross her off your list.

IN ANSWER TO Susie and Sherry: Forgive me for sounding like a stuffy old grandma, but I honestly believe that if you select the right kind of games and have good records for dancing, you won't have couples seeking out the dimly-lit corners. Probably there are certain ones who start breaking up the party into twosomes. They're the ones to leave off your next invitation list.

Why not an old-fashioned picnic for the gang? Martha Carr's free leaflet will suggest some good games. Be sure to inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request.

What to Wear

By Louise Trescott

WORKING wife has special problems with her wardrobe. A woman of stocky proportions has problems. And summer weather adds its problems. When all three quandaries are rolled into one, the wisdom of Solomon and the magic of Houdini are needed to solve it skillfully. Mrs. Ellmont's situation illustrates:

LOUISE TRESCOTT

"I am a married woman who is working and unable to spend very much on clothes. I work in a hospital where I come in contact with doctors and patients. Could you help with a summer wardrobe? I plan to make it myself. What would be suitable so I could change it around so it wouldn't look like the same thing? I am interested in skirts, blouses and dresses. What type of materials and colors? I am 5 feet 4 inches, weigh 150 and wear a 30 skirt. I have dark brown eyes, light brown hair and medium complexion."

YOUR PROPORTIONS tell me you are heavy for your height so my first advice is not to wear skirts and blouses unless they match. Even so, they are likely to be a bit untidy at the waist.

There's nothing more comfortable for summer or better for your figure than the classic coat dress. I suggest you plan to make five, basically the same but with slight differences in closing and with different types of collars. Search carefully for a pattern (perhaps two) and be sure they fit. Make one extra collar for each dress. These collars will do much to accomplish the changes you mentioned. Choose materials that wash easily and perhaps need no ironing—or if they do, ironing a coat dress is simple.

AS EXAMPLES OF MATERIAL AND COLOR: a dacron and silk blend in gray, the extra collar of ice blue rayon poplin; an uncrushable beige linen, extra collar in shrimp—pink linen; a navy blue cotton, the extra collar in white lace; a brown slubbed cotton, the extra collar in ivory pique; a black sheer nylon, the extra collar in tucked white batiste.

Get one natural straw hat and several pairs of summer gloves to match hat. Buy a natural straw bag. Use these accessories with everything. But get comfortable cool shoes in brown, navy and black. Your feet should be pampered. Also buy some interesting summer jewelry in white, ivory and red. This need not be expensive.

Buy a rain treated summerweight coat in beige cotton poplin or gabardine. Tucked folded slip-ons in your bag, also folded rain cover for your hat, and you can face your summer work with confidence.

Question Box

By Josephine Lowman

Q. "PLEASE tell me the difference between toilet water and cologne and perfume and when to use them."

A. Toilet water and cologne are much lighter in fragrance. These should be used in everyday, daytime life. Perfumes are for the evening and for more formal or dress-up occasions. I do not mean that perfume is inappropriate in the daytime but the toilet water or cologne should be used for work-day or outdoor times.

Q. "SOME EXERCISES make me dizzy. For instance, the one where I rise high on my toes with my arms raised overhead and I look up. Also the one when I make circles with my head. Is there something wrong with me?"

A. No, not if you feel this way only when you exercise. People differ in this. Discard any exercises which make you dizzy. There are plenty others.

Q. "I AM A GIRL of 16 and a sophomore in high school. My legs seem to chap and peel. They do not get sore but they look very rough. I don't look nice in shorts."

A. Massage your legs with a good body lotion every night before going to bed. This condition can also come from vitamin deficiency. Talk to your doctor about this.

Rita Stars in a Barefoot Dance

By Sheilah Graham

HOLLYWOOD. RITA HAYWORTH danced barefoot on the lawn, Jack Lemmon played the piano, and Robert Mitchum, the cast and crew of "Fire Down Below" put away 130 pounds of prime steaks at Producer Cubby Scoble's barbecue in Trinidad, according to a letter from that island. Rita is amazing the company with her devil-may-care attitude. "This rumored she's in love again."

Dale Robertson and Mary Murphy are delaying their honeymoon until he makes "A Thousand Guns of Justin Malloy" in Guatemala. Nothing like having the company pay the expenses. And Anita Ekberg can linger in London with husband Anthony Steel until the end of June. Then she has to begin the first of five pictures she'll make here. Marilyn Monroe made a July 17th with me in London. For the next six weeks, Marilyn tells me, all she intends to do is some studying at the Actors Studio in New York.

JOHN BARRYMORE JR. is reading the script of "Private Kingdom." Whatever happened to his movie career? Leslie Howard's son Ronald will be joined here by his wife, from England. They plan to stay awhile after he finishes "Drango" with Jeff Chandler. Eva Marie Saint and Jeff Hayden, her director-husband, are making it final and sending for their New York apartment furniture. Henry Fonda refuses to discuss the brunette he's been dating, except for, "She's just an old friend."

MARILYN MONROE... JULY DATE IN LONDON.

Kim Novak, agog over the attentions of Count Mario Bandini, remains in the East to appear with premieres of her "Eddy Duchin Story" movie. "I've never met anyone as attractive as the Count," Kim phoned me, and it looks like the romance with Mae Krim has taken the long count.

MARGE AND GOWER CHAMPION have bought the five-bedroom house Ronald Reagan built for Jane Wyman when they hit the big time during their marriage.

Jeanne Crain is getting away from it all—and she's had all she can take, she tells me. Jeanne and her four children will spend the summer in a rented house at Laguna. She hopes that, on her return, Paul Brinkman will agree to an amicable divorce.

The Little Woman

Hiatus in the Butterfly Department

By Clarissa Start

SUMMER is a beautiful season. The flowers bloom. The birds sing. The weeds look almost like grass when they're cut. You get out the lawn chairs and watch the children happily submerging each other in the pool. Clubs and committees suspend meetings and practically nobody asks you to make a speech.

For a person who hates to make speeches, you sure make a lot of them, a friend said to me not long ago. This is true. I don't know exactly how it happens. All those good resolutions. No more speeches. Well, only the ones that are positively unavoidable. And then your husband's most influential contact or the sweet old lady who's always been so nice to you, or the father of your best friend calls up. He or she is program chairman and explains flatteringly that, "they found out I knew you." And besides, they hold out the clinching argument: "I have to get somebody." The date is on a Tuesday three or four months away, obviously an unlikely time. It will never get here. Next thing you know it's the next square on the date book.

THE WORST THING about it is that the ordeal usually is connected with eating. A luncheon, a dinner, a banquet. They serve all your favorite foods, fried chicken and hot biscuits and ice cream with strawberry sauce. The poor speaker pushes and prods the food and nibbles around the edges.

"You're not nervous?" the program chairman laughs. "Not you, of all people? Well, you'd certainly never guess it to look at you."

You would if you had a flug,oscope, sis. Butterflies are chasing butterflies. You tell yourself it's only natural nervous tension and the professionals assure you it's good to feel that way. You'd fall flat if you were calm and self-assured. At the moment you'd just as soon be calm and self-assured and put the audience to sleep.

The audience—that's another thing. Pick out one or two people in the group, an expert advised, and direct your talk to them. You wonder which hapless soul to select as a focus for your attention. There's a happy smiling woman who nods at you encouragingly. She looks as if she'd react to your light opening remarks. Trouble with those smilers is they keep right on smiling and nodding through the serious, soul-searing portions of your discourse and it's disconcerting.

THERE'S USUALLY a woman who glares at you throughout the entire talk making you wonder apprehensively what you've done to antagonize her. She usually approaches you at the end to tell you how much she's enjoyed it and how she'd like to book you for her own club.

Then there's the woman who's afraid she's left the iron turned on at home. She worries about it all during the speech and so does the speaker. Then there's the one who comes up to you and says, "We were in the seventh grade together but I'll just bet you don't remember me," and horror of horrors, you don't.

But then there's the nice one, the kindly woman in the last row who's drinking it all in with rapt attention. She's the one who comes up when it's all over and says, "It's too bad the microphone wasn't turned up high enough. I couldn't hear a word you said."

Bamboo blinds or furniture should be cleaned with salt water.

Competition

COMPETITION is a system under which the performance of individuals is compared. On the basis of the results the individuals are divided into brilliant people and dull people. Thereafter the brilliant people are preferred.

This is discouraging to the dull people for whom there appears to be no great demand. But, as time goes on, it will be found that the brilliant people are more fragile than the dull people. They are more likely to suffer from sinuses, and virus infections, and chronic bad colds that keep them at home.

Brilliant people also make good representatives at annual meetings and other public assemblies. If, at the moment, they are not suffering from sinuses, or virus infections, or bad colds, they are picked to go. Even brilliant people are subject to ordinary interruptions that cut into their working time. They have to get physical check-ups and go to the dentist, and get their hair cut, and visit the bank and perform missions for members of the family. And, on fine days, like ordinary people they may be tempted to skip out early.

By for and about Women

Thus, if the dull people do not lose hope and stick around, they will discover that they are the only ones on hand to do what needs to be done. Competition will have vanished and they will be drafted, at which even dull people are good.

In short, if the dull people are patient and bide their time, in spite of the competition from the brilliant people, they may find themselves doing very well.

CHRISTOPHER BILLOPP.

Tuna and Green Beans Plus
 Ingredients: one can (10½ ounces) condensed cream of mushroom soup, one can (15 ounces) French-sliced green beans, one can (seven ounces) tuna, one small green pepper (cut into thin strips), one tablespoon butter or margarine, ½ cup coarsely crushed cracker crumbs, paprika.
 Method: Turn cream of mushroom soup (just as it comes from can) into shallow baking dish; a heat-resistant glass pie plate 8½ by 1½ inches is a good size. Drain beans and add with ¼ cup of the bean liquid. Add tuna, including oil in can; flake tuna into bit-size pieces with a fork. Add green pepper and mix well. Melt butter and stir in cracker crumbs. Sprinkle crumbs over mixture; dust with paprika. Bake in hot (400 degrees) oven until bubbly hot and topping is lightly browned, about 15 minutes. Makes four servings.

Dull Pie Pan
 Don't try to shine up that old tin pie pan. A dull pan gives a better baked bottom crust and a more evenly browned crisp top crust than a shiny pan.

"A SIX-YEAR-OLD TOLD ME THE TRUTH!"
Mrs. A. D., Michigan City, Indiana

"Sometimes children say things adults are too 'polite' to say. That's what happened when my grandson said 'Why isn't your hair pretty any more, Grandma?' I was so hurt I could have cried. When my hair turned gray, I guess I just stopped caring about how I looked. But the boy's remark made me see how foolish I had been."

"The very next day I had a Silver Curl... the home permanent that's custom-made for gray and white hair. And what a wonderful difference it's made! Silver Curl gives me the softest, most manageable waves ever. And it's a good, long-lasting permanent too. Thanks to Silver Curl, my gray hair is truly attractive now. Even my grandson says so. And I know he tells the truth!"

EASY TO DO! Even if you've never had a home permanent, you can have a Silver Curl with ease. Silver Curl is self-neutralizing... no extra steps. You just apply waving lotion... wind up curls... rinse and let dry. That's all!

GOOD NEWS! Silver Curl by Toni has Fresh Air Waving Lotion... odor-free as a wave can be! And it gives a longer-lasting wave than any other home permanent.

"Not now Son... I'm busy"

When a father fails to take the time to listen to his son's problems, he is inviting serious consequences.

For a growing youngster needs the advice, the counsel and affection of his Dad.

Wise fathers make the time to talk...to teach...to help mold the boy into the man.

Even more important, a good father teaches by example. He lives the way he wishes his son to live in the future...a reliable, respected man—fulfilling his duties as a good neighbor and a responsible citizen...exercising self-restraint and moderation in all things.

The intelligent and temperate life must certainly include moderation in the use of whiskey. That is why The House of Seagram, on the occasion of Father's Day, would like to point out again that fine whiskey is a luxury...to be used moderately...at the proper time...and always with common sense.

fertilize with ORTHO-GRO

This fast acting balanced liquid fertilizer can work wonders all over your garden

All garden plants and soils need regular feedings to furnish food for steady, healthy plant growth.

And that's what Improved ORTHO-GRO does—it feeds plants and soil!
Improved ORTHO-GRO Liquid Plant Food contains organic fish in balanced fertilizer that supplies nitrogen, phosphorus and potash to plants and puts phosphorus and potash into the soil. And because ORTHO-GRO is liquid, plants don't have to wait for it to become "available," but can absorb its nutrients quickly.

ORTHO-GRO makes gardens glow. That's definite!

HAWAII has been described as "the greatest volcanic island in the world." It contains two famous peaks which I mentioned earlier this week—Mauna Loa and Mauna Kea—also the mighty crater of Kilauea.

Q. Are those volcanoes active?
A. Mauna Kea is classed as extinct, but it erupted many times in past ages. It built up a cone which is 148 feet higher than Mauna Loa.

Kilauea broke out with eruptions two years ago, after having been quiet for 33 years. Mauna Loa has an important eruption once in about seven years. Rivers of lava flow from openings in this mighty volcano, and make their way down toward the sea.

Sometimes a lava stream from this volcano is several thousand feet wide and flows for a distance of 35 or 40 miles. Thirty years ago, lava reached and buried the village of Hoopuloa on the coast. Happily the residents of the village had plenty of time to escape with their lives.

Q. Is Kilauea a part of Mauna Loa?
A. It is a crater on the slope of the volcanic mountain known as Mauna Loa. Kilauea has a diameter of three miles.

Q. What about the Lake of Fire?
A. The mass of lava which rises in the mighty crater of Kilauea is called the Lake of Fire and is a sight to remember.

Play Safe While You Drive!

Keep alert—chew gum

Avoid traffic jitters and driving drowsiness. Chew gum while you're behind the wheel. Chewing helps relieve strain and tension—helps keep you feeling fresh and alert for safer driving. Chew any brand of gum you like but chew while you drive. Naturally, we recommend refreshing, delicious Wrigley's Spearmint Gum—for lively, satisfying flavor and real chewing enjoyment. A2125
